BOARD RE-HIRES CITY TEACHERS FOR NEXT YEAR

Entire Roster Re-employed as Recommended by Supt.

Frank Fischer

YEAR CONTRACTS VOTED

Question of Salaries To Be Determined Later

All teachers now employed in the Circleville school system were voted new contracts Tuesday evening when the board of education met at the high school.

According to present indications, few changes will occur in the roster for the next school year. Mrs. Lloyd Jones (Dorothy Jones), Miss Marjorie Priest, and Miss Alice Phillips did not seek re-election. Mrs. Jones, teacher of French in the high school, has been replaced by Loren L. Pace, of Roseville, and Miss Grace L. Teegardin, of Duval, has been named to succeed Miss Priest as teacher of music. No one has been appointed to replace Miss Phillips, who has been teaching in the Walnut street second grade.

Fischer Recommends All

The entire roster was approved by the board after recommendation by Supt. Frank Fischer, who also was rehired. All teachers are given one-year contracts, while the length of Mr. Fischer's will be determined at the next board meeting on June 1.

The question of salaries will be considered prior to the next board session. Very little revision is possible, the board believes, because of the condition of the state's funds.

The board decided to interview the architect concerning several proposed changes in the new addition plan, one of which concerns widening of the stage as urged by the Monday Club.

Roster Disclosed

The teachers re-employed Tuesday were:

High school building: Elmer E. Reger, principal; John F. Landrum, physical education; Roy Bowen, history; English, dramatics; Virgil M. Cress, commercial subjects; Alberta Grosvenor, English; Robert Jewett, social sciences and journalism; Kenneth Lea, business arithmetic; Margaret Mattinson, mathematics; Gertrude Pigman, home economics; Elma Rains, Latin and English; Eleanor Ryan, commercial subjects and

SENATE THREATENS JUDICIARY ACT

NEW MUSICAL COURSE STARTED IN NEW YORK

A new "education", started in New York today, is conceded little chance of reaching Circleville.

The Gotham board of education injected "jazz" music into the high school music course, believing pupils should understand it as well as the classical compositions. Jazz and "swing" orchestra leaders, including Benny Goodman, Rudy Vallee, Duke Ellington, Wayne King, George Gershwin, Leo Reisman and Red Nichols have agreed to give weekly lectures in all city high schools.

OHIO WESLEYAN CO-ED LOCATED

Ruth Baumgardner, Missing Since May 1, Found In Boston, Mass.

BOSTON, Mass., May 19.—(UP)—Miss Ruth Baumgardner, 22, Ohio Wesleyan university student, missing since May 1, was found by police at the Hotel Brunswick here today.

The young woman, who had registered as "Dr. V. R. Maher" said that the severe strain of four years of college work had forced her "to escape from myself."

Miss Baumgardner, a comely blonde, said that out of $200 she had borrowed from her sorority she had only 51 cents left. She said she had traveled through Cleveland, Buffalo and Albany. Police wired Ohio Wesleyan officials for further information about her.

SPRINGFIELD, May 19.—(UP)—Donald Trout, 22, a student at Ohio university, Athens, today was reported to have been missing for four days by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Prout of near-by Plattsburg.

The youth had spent a day at his parent's home and left last Saturday morning by traction for Columbus. He has not been seen since.

Young Trout was cashier in the University cafeteria and a check of his accounts by his father showed them to be in order. The boy also was reported to be in good scholastic standing.

COUNCIL MEETS AT 8 TO HANDLE CITY'S BUSINESS

Council will meet Wednesday night, but it appeared doubtful if electric light rates would be up for discussion.

The businessmen appointed by W. E. Wallace, president of the Chamber of Commerce, to consider the commercial rate schedule with councilmen and company officials, are expected at the meeting.

Councilmen are expected to consider the issuance of some notes in anticipation of a bond issue to obtain funds for making preliminary studies for the sewage disposal plant. Test pits are to be dug on the location at the rear of the Container Corporation to determine what type of foundation will be necessary.

NEUDING NAMED TO ANOTHER JOB IN U. B. CHURCH

125 Pay Glowing Tribute To Rev. Toensmeier, Wife

Pastors of Many Churches Participate in Dinner Given in Honor of Highly-Revered Couple

Circleville bid farewell to two christian friends Tuesday evening, expressed appreciation for their 11 years of outstanding service to the community, and bid them Godspeed for the future.

Approximately 125 persons attended a complimentary dinner in the New American Hotel coffee shop honoring the Rev. and Mrs. Emil S. Toensmeier. The Rev. Mr. Toensmeier's resignation as pastor of the Presbyterian church becomes effective June 1.

The dinner was sponsored by Circleville members of the county ministerial association. It was attended by pastors and laymen of all churches, and friends.

Kilpatrick's Tribute

The program included brief complimentary remarks by local and visiting pastors and laymen. Dr. W. B. Kilpatrick, Greenfield, former moderator of the Columbus Presbytery, paid tribute to the Rev. Mr. Toensmeier as an "invaluable presbyter, a wise counselor, a man of strength, a tried and approved friend."

The Rev. L. M. Patterson, Plain City, clerk of the presbytery, said the Rev. Mr. Toensmeier had played an important part in the business affairs of the presbytery and would be greatly missed. He expressed appreciation to the community for honoring the couple.

J. W. Johnson, retired editor, read a paper of tribute to the honored guests, and wished them a most pleasant future.

"We appreciated you as neighbors," Dr. Rev. G. J. Troutman, of the Lutheran church, said. "We will miss your splendid countenances. Although we can not see the fruits of our work now, I assure you your work here has not been in vain. We appreciate what you have done for our town."

The Rev. George L. Troutman used the word "pastor" as the topic for his brief remarks. The

OBSERVERS SAY DEFEAT CERTAIN FOR COURT BILL

More Resignations From Tribunal Possible As Van Devanter Quits

SO LONS REBELLIOUS

Reprisal Warning Brings Reversal of Compromises

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON, May 19.—(UP)—An angry senate rebellion and the possibility of further supreme court retirements moved President Roosevelt's court reorganization plan to the brink of defeat today.

Mr. Roosevelt stood pat against compromise.

But the possibility of further vacancies on the high bench, either by retirement or death, tended to bolster the courage of those Democrats who would welcome almost any escape from a showdown vote on expansion of the court. Their strategy is delay.

More Resignations Sought

Some of Mr. Roosevelt's leaders conceded that he would drop the plan if two more conservatives joined Associate Justice Willis Van Devanter in retirement. It appeared to non-partisan observers that one more retirement would junk the expansion bills.

Administration "brain trusters," confident that some of the "objectives" of Mr. Roosevelt's judiciary plan will be achieved, immediately enlarged their legislative program for this session. They completed bills embracing control of national resources and regulation of wages and hours in industry and planned to revive proposals to reorganize the executive branch of the government.

A court more favorable to New Deal social and economic objectives, however, is assured when the next term begins in October. The appointment of Van Devanter's successor will achieve that. But the sudden supreme court vacancy does not relieve the president of the urgent problem of handling a turbulent senate.

The senate judiciary committee is in open rebellion against Mr. Roosevelt and has rejected all compromise proposals. The committee Slated to be elevated to the presidency at the elections Thursday was H. L. Wilson, Columbus, now vice president, to succeed J. H. Wardorf, Hamilton.

Claude L. Benner, vice president of the Continental America Life Insurance Co., was to speak today on "The Outlook of Inflation." Dr. Ernest M. Fisher, economic advisor for the National Housing Administration in Washington, also will speak.

Seven Injured In Collisions

Two Cars Hit Head-On, Other Crashes Into N. & W. Abutment

Seven persons miraculously escaped with minor injuries Tuesday afternoon and night in three auto accidents.

Three Delaware residents were hurt at 1:30 a. m. Wednesday when the auto in which they were riding crashed into the abutment of the Norfolk & Western underpass at Bell Siding on Route 23, three miles north of Circleville.

James Ray's Face Cut

Those injured were James Ray, 20, and his wife, May, 18, of 102 Potter street, and Pearl Ray, 18, of 126 Fair avenue.

James Ray suffered numerous cuts on the face, forehead and cuts and bruises on the right leg. Mrs. Ray suffered abrasions on the head. Pearl Ray was cut on the face and had a wrist sprained. They were treated by Dr. E. L. Montgomery at Berger hospital, then released.

Pearl Ray, driver of the car, said he went to sleep. The group was returning home after a trip to Huntington, W. Va. Mr. and Mrs. James Ray formerly lived there and had returned for some of their possessions. The car was demolished.

Robert Pickens, Watt street, and Donald Eitel, S. Scioto street, escaped with bruises Tuesday afternoon when the former's car overturned four times on a road near Grove City. The returning to Circleville from the Beulah Park races.

Mr. Pickens swerved his car to avoid striking a car backing out on the highway.

DUKE AND WALLY SIGN CONTRACT FOR MARRIAGE

MONTS, France, May 19.—(UP)—The Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield will maintain separate financial resources after their marriage and not "pool" their goods and assets as is customary under French law, it was revealed today.

The marriage contract signed by the Duke and Mrs. Warfield, now in possession of Dr. Charles Mercier, mayor of Monts, provides for a "separation of goods" not in accordance with the usual French community law. The law provides that the wife's possessions pass to her husband immediately after marriage.

Mrs. Warfield will not have to promise to obey the duke, it was understood, and he will not have to promise to support her.

An official announcement said that Mayor Mercier would perform the ceremony in the chateau at noon on June 3.

A mysterious woman, claiming to be a Hungarian countess, who has pursued the Duke of Windsor for years and has written hundreds of letters urging him not to marry, has appeared at Cannes, announcing her determination to see him if he passes through there.

She started pestering the duke at Cannes several years ago, sending him flowers until she was arrested as a nuisance. She followed him to Austria and was deported.

WHISKEY AND GIN GONE; TOMATO JUICE FOLLOWS

WABASH, Ind., May 10.—(UP)—Police decided today that the thief who stole a dozen cans of tomato juice in one store probably was the same one who burglarized another establishment a few hours earlier of several quarts of whiskey and gin.

JOHN TEETS, 24, NEIGHBOR, KILLS WELDON J. BABB

Young Perry Township Tenant Defends Wife of Deceased Man

QUARREL ENDS FATALLY

Sheriff Makes No Arrest Pending Investigation

Weldon J. Babb, 32, Perry township farmer and father of three children, was shot and killed Tuesday night by John Teets, 24, unmarried son of Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Teets, tenants on the farm operated by Babb.

Babb was shot in the stomach and head by two charges from a 10-gauge double barrel shotgun. The shooting occurred at the Teets home, a quarter of a mile from the Babb residence. It took place after a family quarrel during which Mrs. Babb was severely beaten. She had sought refuge from her husband in the home of the tenants.

No arrest had been made Wednesday morning pending further investigation of the case by Sheriff Charles Radcliff, Prosecutor George E. Gerhardt and Coroner C. E. Bowers.

Sheriff Radcliff said he was notified about three hours after the shooting.

Mrs. Babb Beaten

Teets had left his home to go to the residence of relatives, the sheriff said, and Mrs. Babb was so severely beaten she was not in a condition for questioning.

Coroner Bowers had returned no verdict in the case Wednesday morning. He was uncertain when it would be announced. The coroner and Sheriff Radcliff said they believed Babb became deranged.

Sheriff Radcliff said the family quarrel started in the Babb home at supper time. He was told Babb had been "acting queerly," and when he appeared at the home for his evening meal started complaining with his wife, Bertha, about the food that had been prepared.

He demanded either fish or veal for supper, the sheriff was told, and Mrs. Babb offered to get it for him if he would give her the money. She told the sheriff he became enraged, went to the kitchen and started throwing articles off the table. The sheriff learned that on the previous evening Babb had severely beaten his wife.

Retired to Bed

After his actions in the kitchen, Babb asked his wife to heat some water for him. She complied. He then undressed and went to bed. Later he sent one of his children to the Teets home to have John Teets go to Williamsport to buy him some supper.

Mrs. Babb told the sheriff her husband asked for more warm water and during another argument

RAIL AND STEEL SHARES DECLINE

General Drop Recorded As Utilities Go To Lowest Since 1935

Wheat climbed two cents on the local market Wednesday to $1.31 a bushel. Corn prices remained the same with the yellow variety at $1.25, and white, $1.28.

NEW YORK, May 19.—(UP)—Ralls and steels led a general decline on the stock exchange today. Utilities sagged slightly to new lows since 1935.

CLINTON COUNTY HUNTS RECLUSE, MISSING 13 DAYS

WILMINGTON, May 19.—(UP)—Russell Gotherman, 33, an ex-convict, was held in the Clinton county jail here today on charges of kidnaping Frank J. Schofield, 78, wealthy recluse who resided near Wilmington.

County and city officials, aided by Civilian Conservation Corps workers, searched the Schofield farm at Clarksville for clues which might reveal the whereabouts of Schofield who disappeared on May 6.

Ora Slater, Cincinnati private detective, was employed by the city and county in an effort to "crack the case." Slater questioned Gotherman last night, but the latter denied knowledge of what happened to Schofield.

Authorities said Gotherman made conflicting statements.

D. W. Haynie, 33, reputed slot machine collector, also was reportedly missing here today. He disappeared Monday after telephoning his wife he would be home for dinner. He is the father of three children.

The Earl Essick dwelling, which is being built in East Main street by Raymond Rader, is beginning to look like the house it is intended to be, frame up and rafters on.

Salesmen Interesting
Out in the West where the tall corn grows is a state called Iowa. We met a youngster from out there today, a salesman, and this makes about a dozen of them we have "taken down the line" in the last ten days, but of course not all from Iowa. And every last one of 'em up to this time, has turned out good, just fine in fact, and this chap we met today was as good as the best of them. He talked chicken, because it is his business to appoint agencies in 26 counties of this state to sell fowl remedies for most every ill the poultry family is heir to. Being interested in chickens because we used to roast them quite often out beside a blazing fire in the woods, was prepared to talk chicken. His 26 counties include southeastern Ohio and he says maybe Iowa can beat us on tall corn but when it comes to hills we're it. But believe it or not he says he has some fine dealers who sell lots of their remedies right down there in the hills. This courteous and kindly salesman we are telling you about is Leon Cole, Waterloo, Iowa. Says he has been in Ohio four months and can't say that he likes it very well.

Light Revamped
The outside construction of the T. A. Boor traffic light is being revamped and new patterns made which will give it a streamlined effect in appearance. No test to our knowledge has yet been made to determine the cost of operating this light for one month. The service.

THE OLD HOME TOWN By STANLEY

vice this light renders cannot be excelled.

Street Discussed
According to clerk Leon Taylor, council, Monday night, other than pay bills, did a lot of discussing. It is imperative that something must be done with East Main street. But just what is the question in discussion. From what Mr. Taylor said an engineer will likely be employed to establish lines and grades. And this done, an estimate can be made as to the cost of the improvement. "It will take a lot of money to fix that street as it should be," he said.

Many at School
Quite a few of the Ashville ladies attended the cooking school at Commercial Point. If one can estimate the success of this cooking school by the way the Scioto township people always "put across" their Homecomings, it will go over in a big way.

First Class Recalled
Now that the local schools have but a few more days yet to go, a list of the teachers, especially the superintendents would be in order. The first Ashville high class to graduate was composed of Ella Morrison, Gertrude Teegardin, Wilbur Hoffines and Orville Newton. The first two of the class are deceased. Wilbur Hoffines is a Columbus dentist and Orville Newton is with the Hedges Lumber Co. The class graduated in 1896, with Clinton B. Shook, superintendent.

Ashville School
There are four boys and girls in the second grade who have been neither absent nor tardy during the school year. They are Jim Irwin, Lloyd McManes, Cleoria Myers and Dick Pettibone. Frank Ray has missed only one half a day.

Twelve pupils in the second grade will receive Ohio Pupils Reading Circle Certificates. They are Donna Jean Hallarn, Raquel Chamberlain, Jim Irwin, Jerry Brown, Cleoria Myers, Bobby Lindsey, Rolline Harris, Estell Lee LeMaster, Lois Johnston, Bob Pettibone, Conrad Johnson, Neil Murphy and Lloyd McManes.

Our Canary Class in reading have read besides their Elson reader, nine supplementary readers.

There are thirteen people from the fourth grade who have received the Ohio reading circle diplomas. There are 13 certificates to be given.

We have six new books. Their names are Rex, Carmen of the Gold Coast, Four Great Americans, Four Great Inventors, Hans Brinker and the Junkie Book.

The high school board of education met in regular session Monday evening of this week and transacted the following business: Paid bills; decided to hold baccalaureate services in the M. E. Church, instead of the school building, as has been the custom in the past; arranged to have all typewriters repaired and cleaned during the summer; voted to have some rooms refurnished; and re-elected the entire teaching staff except Mr. Spence, English teacher, who had submitted a written statement that he did not care to be considered an applicant for reelection.

Government Victor
There was no further doubt that King George VI had deferred to the government in agreeing that no member of the royal family should go to Montana, but, by attendance at the ceremony, give royal or official countenance to the wedding which government and church so fiercely opposed before the abdication.

Announcement of the duke's wedding day was but a brief sensation in London.

What talk there is centers, in higher circles, not on the wedding itself but on the day selected—the birthday of the late King George V, Windsor's father, who himself sternly reproved the duke for his association with Mrs. Warfield, then the wife of Ernest Simpson.

The discussion was this, and opinion seemed equally divided; whether by selecting his father's birthday for his wedding the duke had offended good taste or made a gesture of friendship to his father's memory.

But the view seemed to be, in high circles and low, that if the duke must marry Mrs. Warfield, the sooner it was over and forgotten the better. There was no disposition to keep his name in mind, and even the announcement of his wedding date yesterday got no more newspaper space than did the story his brother-successor George VI would drive in state to the old "city" today to lunch with the lord mayor.

LAURA NUTTER, AMANDA NURSE, DEAD AT HOME

Miss Laura Alice Nutter, widely known Amanda nurse, died Tuesday at her home in the Fairfield county village. Death followed a brief illness.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. at the home with the Rev. L. A. Donnelly officiating. Burial will be in Dutch Hollow cemetery by W. A. Rathbarger.

Miss Nutter is survived by a sister, Mrs. Anna Bussert, of the home, and a nephew, Lee S. Nutter, of Texas.

William Gillette directed in his will that his Connecticut estate be sold to no "blithering saphead." Yale men will resent this.

SOCIAL SECURITY
ACT'S APPROVAL
FORECAST SOON

Additional Retirement Of Justices Hinted After
Van Devanter's Move

SUCCESSOR IN DOUBT

Adverse Decision Certain to Bring Rehearing

WASHINGTON, May 19—(UP)—Supreme court approval of the New Deal's Social Security act within the next two weeks was forecast today by examination of factors surrounding the retirement of Justice Willis Van Devanter from the bench.

Speculation also centered on possible additional retirements—regarded as a practical certainty within the next few months—the name of Van Devanter's successor and the effect this successor will have on the court's attitude toward New Deal and other legislation.

It was generally believed that President Roosevelt would name Van Devanter's successor quickly. That he will select for the vacancy a person whose qualifications are above question but whose ideals favor the New Deal was thought certain. Some believed search for such a nominee would impel the president to appoint a jurist now serving in one of the lower courts.

Appointments Watched
The impelling motive in picking a distinguished lower court judge would be its effect on the court plan. Many who oppose the plan have employed the argument new jurists appointed under the court plan would be too radical.

Hunt Pistol in Taylor Quiz

AS LOS ANGELES officials pushed a new investigation into the 15-year-old slaying of the film director, William Desmond Taylor, a tiny pearl-handled pistol that once belonged to Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, mother of Mary Miles Minter, former screen star and sweetheart of Taylor, was hunted as a possible clue. Mrs. Shelby, left, shown with Miss Minter on their way to testify before the grand jury, said the pistol was a toy.

by nature too subservient to the White House.

Belief that Van Devanter's retirement may presage a New Deal victory in the four pending social security act test cases was based on several factors.

During its present term the court has not ruled a single time against the administration. To do so in the security act cases might work substantially against the court's prestige at the present moment.

This is true because of an unusual factor in the status of the test cases, involving the validity of state and federal unemployment insurance laws and of old age pensions. They will probably be decided either next Monday or on June 1, the last two meeting days of the court term.

Because the decision comes at the term end, an adverse five to four verdict might stand only during the summer months. The government probably could obtain a rehearing by the tribunal next fall, when Van Devanter's successor would undoubtedly be on the bench.

Reversals Condemned

If the successor were of the "liberal" group, he would undoubtedly vote for a rehearing and for the validity of the laws. This would amount to a complete reversal by the court within a period of a few months. Such reversals have been heartily condemned by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes as dangerous for the prestige of the court so he would undoubtedly do all that he could to avoid the possibility of such an event.

Woman Asks Death
For Killing Daughter

RIVERHEAD, N. Y., May 19—(UP)—Mrs. Helen Tiernan, 25-year-old blonde, sallow widow prayed today that death would be the penalty for killing her blue-eyed, 7-year-old daughter, Helen. Between sobs, she begged for "just one peep" at her son, Jimmy, 4, who survived her murderous attack.

Suffolk county authorities placed a guard outside her cell to prevent any attempt at suicide, while plans were made for a trial next month.

Mrs. Tiernan struck Helen with a hatchet, slit her throat and set fire to her clothing—and tried to kill Jimmy in the same manner—because they stood in the way of her love for George Christopoulos, swarthy Greek restaurant steward and former boxer.

"I want to plead guilty," she told Justice of the Peace Donald W. Shore in the town hall at Patchogue, N. Y.

Under New York state law, no court can accept such a plea to a charge of first degree murder.

"But I am guilty," she insisted. It was only after several minutes of persuasion that she agreed to change her plea.

Then she was led away, her face hidden in the folds of her cream-colored coat. A crowd of several hundred persons, mostly women, stared in silence.

The man she loved—loved so deeply that she tried to sacrifice her children to make room for him in her small apartment—was held as a material witness. She had absolved him of any part in the crime, after recanting an earlier confession which had implicated him.

"They (police) told me George was married to somebody else," she said. "They kept telling me things he said about me. They made me so angry I said George helped me do it. But he didn't."

It was little Jimmy's baby prattle that gave police a picture of what had happened in the woods near Brookhaven, N. Y., last Saturday morning while the children planned a gay picnic. From a lunch basket, Mrs. Tiernan drew a hatchet. While Jimmy looked on, terror-stricken, his sister's head was crushed, her throat was cut with a pair of scissors, and she fell, moaning, to the ground.

The boy turned to run, but his mother—described by her neighbors as "a wonderful woman"—grabbed him and again wielded the hatchet. A bread knife made a four-inch gash in his throat.

Mrs. Tiernan said she poured gasoline over Helen's body and set fire to child's clothing. Gasoline was spilled on Jimmy, but it was not ignited.

and truck were found near the baby's carriage. They were made of sheet metal and had many sharp corners. The baby's face was bruised and her right eye was blackened.

ASKING DIVORCE

POPLARVILLE, Miss., May 19—(UP)—The Bilbos—Senator Theodore and Mrs. Linda Gaddys—transferred their marital difficulties to this Mississippi town today where public marital discord is all but unknown and the divorce is as much a rarity as a Republican.

In consequence the town was packed for the public airing of a situation that has been a matter for gossip throughout the state for years. The entire Pearl river bar was acting as counsel for the senator who once had ambitions to "out Huey Huey Long" and who is a Baptist minister and was three times governor.

Mrs. Bilbo, in her turn, had subpoenaed most of the state's political figures who have all known the Bilbos for years, and, presumably, will be asked to substantiate her charge that Bilbo had been unfaithful to her.

The senator, his famous diamond stick-pin gleaming in his cravat and waving airily to his political friends and frowning at his enemies, was asking Chancellor Ben Stevens to hear his evidence that Mrs. Bilbo had subjected him to "cruel and inhuman" treatment. Mrs. Bilbo was asking that he transfer the case to Jackson where she lived for 14 years, mostly while her husband was governor. Her divorce suit is a counter one to Bilbo's original action.

PADLOCKING A CAMPUS
THE American Federation of Teachers charges there is a lack of academic freedom at Yale. On what grounds does the federation base its charge. Just this: That the university, or its responsible authorities, denied Senator Gerald P. Nye an opportunity to address the students, and that in 1933, while Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora, of New York, was acting as special counsel to the Senate Committee on Banking he was refused a meeting place because his work had taken on the character of a "sensational side show."
These items were brought to light by the federation in investigating the dismissal of Dr. Jerome Davis, an associate professor of Yale Divinity School. The investigators charged that Dr. Davis was threatened with dismissal if he did not withdraw the invitation to Senator Nye.
This manifestation of an anti-liberal policy does not necessarily mean that the progress of the country will be thwarted nor that the rights of free speech, assembly and press will be abrogated. But it is not out of place at this time to point out to Yale that liberalism is not an unworthy symbol to embrace. The university authorities need only look across the waters to countries where academic freedom is a myth, simply because those in power permitted themselves to be dragged down into the mud of blind thinking.

50,000 DOOMED TO DIE
THE National Safety Council reports 8,500 traffic deaths in the first quarter of 1937, an increase of 26 per cent over the same period last year. If this rate of human destruction is maintained, with the normal increases for the busy Summer months, about 50,000 persons will die in automobile accidents during the year.
If we knew in advance that 50,000 lives were to be wiped out during the year by war or fire or flood, or almost any cause aside from those that are normal, we would be stirred to the depths by fear and anxiety. The doom of 50,000 motorists is accepted with amazing indifference, due to the fact that such a slaughter has become commonplace. And it has become commonplace because we are complacent.
When we hear down on the potential killers behind the wheel there will be a different story. When we throw the speeders and reckless drivers and drunks into jail and bar the incompetents from the highways, there will not be 50,000 deaths a year from motor accidents.
The case of Hitler is more serious than we believed. It is reported that he actually believes his own nonsense.

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:
Up to another cold day of rain and to hear repeated questions of "will Summer ever arrive?" Everything happens eventually, warm weather being no exception. Breakfast near the fire and then out and about the paves, finding everywhere an interest in the condition of George Forster with all citizens expressing sincere desire for his quick recovery.
Here comes Elmer Reger with tickets for the play at the high school Friday night and there goes Ed Mason, who has been named on the Chamber of Commerce committee that will seek to settle the light rate controversy. Chatted with Pete Connor, who was born and reared in the county, but who for a quarter of a century has been living in Texas. Here on a vacation and spending part of it watching the horses run at Beulah park. Pete says that a race track scene always reminds him of Christmas. "Half the people joust and the others going about with wry faces."
There's Catherine Brown, who has fully recovered from the effects of a pint of raw alcohol. The alcohol was in a bottle, fell from a high shelf at the Gallaher store where she is employed, and knocked her unconscious. Even gave her a headache. First time ever did hear of alcohol that remained in a bottle hurting anyone. Heard that a farmer south of the village is charging $1 a day per person for the right to fish on his farm. Have fished those waters on several occasions and if all the fish did catch there were sold at $1,000 a pound would not have been able to raise enough cash to pay the fee for one day. Probably the farmer objects to fishermen of the thoughtless class trampling his crops. And I don't blame him at all. Too many folk have absolutely no respect for the property of others.
See by the paper that Ohio bankers are assembling in Columbus to discuss, among other things the outlook for inflation. Most thoughtful men of means regard inflation as a certainty and have been shifting from paper to real investments for a year or more. When the dollar's value drops it will be much more satisfactory to have money invested in actual property that will retain its comparative value than in stocks or bonds that may be paid off at their face value in dollars worth much less than the dollars with which they were bought.
Ohio's death penalty kidnap law is now in effect with the signing by Martin L. And a good thing, too. Kidnapers should be introduced to the electrified chair. They learn there so much about sorrow and the value of human life. Of course the instruction is so practical that they get no personal benefit from it, but other improperly intentioned youths may learn by example.
That hissing and roaring sound is made by skyrocketing prices. A dollar will buy more today than it will tomorrow, so buying right now is wise — if you have the dollar. Most men of business declare more money is flowing through their tills now than a year ago, yet they are making less money. All of which may mean something, but if it don't then it will not be entirely out of step with most other things of the day.

CHAPTER 54
CHARLES hesitated when the girl asked him point blank why he was so deep in the plot to obtain her money. Before he could speak Jacqueline went on, speaking to Charles from the dark room above his office:
"You couldn't help yourself, could you, Charles? Something or somebody had got you down, and you had to do what you were told."
"I'm not making excuses, Jacqueline."
"Something happened—years ago, perhaps—something tremendous that got you down, and you couldn't get up again. I spotted that when I first met you, Charles. Remember? If it wasn't drink, what was it?"
He was silent.
"Lutman?"
"Yes—Lutman."
"Well, go on, Charles."
"Well, it's a pretty sordid story, Jacqueline. I got in a mess—used money belonging to a client. Lutman got me out of it—lent me the money and got a paper out of me that admitted the whole thing. He has been holding it over my head ever since, threatening that if I didn't do every dirty job he wanted done he'd expose the whole business, get me struck off the rolls, and—well, there it is. I hadn't the pluck to face it. I was down, and I just hadn't the courage to get up."
"But you tried to get up, Charles," said the girl. "You didn't want me to sign that deed. You tried to persuade me not to, and did all you could to stop my marrying Jim. That showed you were beginning to try to get up. And then you kidnapped me, and stood up to Lutman. That was because you were struggling a little harder and because you'd begun to think that if only you could get up it wouldn't matter so very much if Lutman did get you struck off the rolls. You'd begun to remember, Charles, that there are some things more worth being than just a lawyer. Am I right?"
"Yes."
"And now," she went on, "you're so determined to get up again that you don't care what Lutman does. He can do what he likes, but you're still going to get up in spite of him. That's right, isn't it?"
"Quite right, Jacqueline. I've decided that I've done with Lutman and his dirty job."
"Why?" asked the girl. "Why have you decided that?"
Again Charles was silent.
"I'll tell you why," said Jacqueline. "Because something tremendous has happened to you, something that's pushing you up again, just as I said it would. Something quite tremendous has happened to you, Charles, hasn't it?"
His voice was not quite steady as he replied.
"Yes, Jacqueline. The most tremendous thing in the world has happened to me."
"When?" she demanded. "When did this tremendous thing happen to you?"
"At Cobenzl—on the terrace," said Charles.
"Thanks, Charles," she said. "That's all I wanted you to tell me. Good night."
"Good night," said Charles, and softly closed the door.
At 12 o'clock, when Lutman walked into the office, Charles was seated at his desk, deep in the study of an impressive-looking tome. Lutman seated himself on a chair on the opposite side of the desk.
"Good evening, Charles," he said pleasantly. "One of these days, if you continue to be so studious and industrious, you may become quite an eminent lawyer—provided, of course, that the Law society don't decide to remove your name from the rolls."
Stuckey did not glance up at him.
"Just a moment before you start talking, Lutman," he said. "I'm chasing a rather tricky point and I don't want to lose the thread."
He turned a page and frowned. "This book doesn't make it at all clear. I'll see what Chitty says." He got up, went to the bookshelf, took out Chitty on Contracts and stood for some moments, his back toward Lutman, pouring over it. Then, replacing the book, he returned to his seat.
"That settles it," he said. "Chitty is always reliable. And now, Lutman, I'm at your service. What is it this time—blackmail? Or merely another perfect little gentleman to serve as a husband for Jacqueline Smith?"
"The worthy Charles is pleased to be facetious," smiled Lutman. "Blackmail, as you know, is a clumsy method of earning a living, and whatever else I may be, Charles, I am never clumsy. But don't let us start an argument. You're liable to become heated in argument, Charles—especially lately." Let us discuss the affair calmly and quietly.
"If you've some fresh affair in mind, Lutman..."
"Fresh? You should know me better than that, Charles. One thing at a time, and that done well, is my motto. Until the Jacqueline Smith business is satisfactorily concluded, no fresh affair is of the least interest to me."
"The Jacqueline Smith business is finished. Not satisfactorily, perhaps, but definitely finished. Jacqueline has refused to marry Jim Asson, and she has refused to marry you—I suppose you asked her, didn't you?"
"Naturally," smiled Lutman. "It was the obvious way out of the impasse."
"And she turned you down? But of course she would. And that finishes it. Get that clear, Lutman, will you? There's no other way of laying hands on the money and the whole scheme is off. The sooner you realize that and produce Jacqueline, if you've done her any injury..."
"Yes, you told me. If I remember rightly you were to break every bone in my body. And I told you that I had no idea where the girl was."
"You were lying, Lutman. Do you suppose I don't know what was in your mind? Jim Asson knew, anyway. He knew that rather than lose the money you wouldn't stop at murder."
Lutman raised a hand in protest. "My dear Charles, if you believe that of me, you misjudge me. Such a thought never entered my head. And if you want proof of that, and that I had nothing to do with Jacqueline's disappearance, I can give you quite convincing proof. Jacqueline has reappeared. I've seen her—this evening—at her mother's flat."
"In other words, Lutman, you got scared and decided not to go on with your scheme. Where is she now? At home?"
"She was at home," replied the other. "I saw her there. But she was in a somewhat hysterical condition and had a quarrel with her mother, and went off in a temper. Saying she would never come back." He smiled. "But she will, Charles. As soon as her tantrums are over she'll be back home again and then we can proceed."
"Proceed?"
Lutman nodded.
"Proceed to the collection of the $1,500,000, Charles—at least, to my share of it. Unfortunately our original scheme has miscarried. Jacqueline knows of the legacy. She saw a copy of the will at my flat, and I'm afraid she understood it. In that case she is hardly likely to sign a deed handing it all over to her husband."
"If she has seen the will the whole thing is finished."
"On the contrary, Charles. There are other means. Don't forget that I have put a great deal of time and trouble and money into this particular enterprise, and I don't propose to abandon it without some compensation. I shall not be exacting: $100,000 will satisfy me, and believe me, I have no difficulty about my getting that."
"You're an optimist, Lutman. It looks hopeless to me."
"It would be hopeless," Lutman admitted, "but for one most fortunate fact, and that fact is, Charles, that Jacqueline Smith is in love with you. I have not the least doubt of it. She is so much in love with you that if you tell her you drew up that deed in good faith, knowing nothing of the will, she will believe you. Tell her anything you like to exonerate yourself and she will believe you. It's up to you to work out the details of convincing defense, and you may rely on me to back you up."
"Thanks," said Charles with a wry smile.
"And that leaves the way clear for you to marry her."
"Thanks," said Charles again.
"We're not going to argue about it," added Lutman. "You're going to marry Jacqueline. Of course you can refuse, but I don't fancy you will." He tapped his pocket. "I'll have that scrap of paper, Charles, and I'll have that deed which you drew up, so I feel sure you'll be reasonable."
"But suppose I agree, Lutman? You won't be any nearer your $100,000, will you?"
"Much, much nearer, Charles," smiled the other. "I shall still have the scrap of paper, and if you bear that in mind I feel sure you will find some way of persuading your wife to let you have $100,000. I'm sure, anyway, that you will try very hard. And if you can't persuade her—I should dislike being obliged to do it, but I fancy a sight of that scrap of paper would persuade her. I don't believe that a woman with $1,500,000 would refuse to pay a paltry $100,000 to get possession of a document which might easily ruin her husband."
"I see," said Charles thoughtfully. "So I'm to marry Jacqueline Smith so that you may have the opportunity to blackmail her for $100,000?"
"Crudely expressed, Charles, but substantially correct. Well?"
Stuckey was silent for a time, gazing thoughtfully at his blotting pad.
"Darn you, Lutman!" he exclaimed at last. "It's always the same, isn't it? You've got me down, and you keep me down, with every dirty scheme you evolve in that rotten mind of yours. Why can't you let me up? Why can't you give me a chance? Lord knows I've done enough dirty jobs for you in the past."

DIET AND HEALTH
Prevention of Infection First Rule of Treatment
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE DOMESTIC science teacher, nurse, Boy or Girl Scout, or house mother, is called upon to administer first aid frequently. In doing so confidence is of great importance, and there is nothing that contributes more to confidence than acquiring simple methods. The first aid is not supposed to treat an injury for complete cure, but simply to prepare it for the doctor who will apply the final scientific arrangement.
The second thing that is demanded of first aid is that it shall do no harm.
Both of these things are summed up principally in the first thing that must always be considered, and that is the prevention of infection. Any open wound, cut, bruise or burn is liable to infection from the air, from contaminated dressings, and from finger touches. The germs, the staphylococcus and streptococcus, which cause skin infection in the great majority of cases, are everywhere in nature, always ready to pounce into an open wound and begin to grow and do harm.
Never wash a wound. Never try to irrigate it. If the wound is already infected, pouring water over it simply spreads the infection around. If you haven't a sterile piece of gauze to put on the wound, don't put anything on it. Air is less dangerous than a contacting object. It is easy enough to make a sterile dressing by taking a handkerchief or a towel and putting it in boiling water for three minutes. After this is cooled doctor who will apply the final scientific arrangement.

If Wound is Deep
In any wound that is at all deep or looks serious, it is best not to try to use antiseptics, such as iodine or mercurichrome, but wait for the doctor to make his decision. If the edges of the wound are dirty and are to be wiped off, boiling water always should be used, as some of it is likely to seep into the wound.
Avoid court plaster and collodion, also surgeon's plaster or adhesive tape, except to hold a bandage from slipping out of place.
All other methods of first aid treatment are secondary to this one of preventing infection. It is better to do nothing than to do something doubtful. If a doctor is available and can be reached within a half hour, it won't hurt to leave even a deep wound uncovered until he arrives.
If in a wound in which home first aid has been used exclusively and it has been decided it is not serious enough to call the doctor, infection develops in a day or two, it will be known by redness, pain, red streaks in the skin around the wound, or the presence of pus. Certainly under these circumstances medical advice should be sought.
The simple, modern first aid treatment of every little scratch represents an accumulation of human knowledge painfully built up through ages of research, experiment and experience. It is simple enough now to apply an antiseptic and a sterile dressing. Yet in the background stand Harvey's studies of blood circulation, Pasteur's revelation of bacteria, Lister's pioneering in antiseptics, and many other outstanding contributions to human progress.

Mrs. W. Ulm Discusses Timepieces During Tuesday Meeting

The Pickaway Plains chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution were delightfully entertained Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Walter Kindler, E. Franklin street. Assisting Mrs. Kindler were Mrs. Seymour Miller, Mrs. Emmitt Crist, Mrs. Dwight Steele, Mrs. C. E. Wright, and Mrs. Paul Johnson.

Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker regent, presided at the business session, and introduced Mrs. Stuart Bolin, of Columbus, who told of her work of collecting genealogical records of Ohio. One important part of her work is securing "Three Generation Charts" from the pupils of the public schools.

Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker, a delegate to the 46th D. A. R. Continental Congress, gave an interesting report. Youth improvement and youth education is the theme that runs through the policies of the D. A. R. for in the youth rests the destiny of State.

Mrs. W. T. Ulm had collected an exhibit of old clocks and watches, and read an interesting paper "Our Grandfathers' Timepieces".

In part, she said Prehistorical man told time by shadows. Water clocks were among the most ancient. An Egyptian water clock used 2000 years B. C. was a coconut shell filled with water, and time was counted by the time it took this water to drip through a small opening in the shell. Scipio brought a water clock to Rome, 150 years before Christ. Sun dials have been in use since very ancient times. They are only fair weather recorders, as "they count only the golden hours". The hour glass was designed by the people of the desert and is still used in the English House of Parliament.

Among the many famous names of clock makers in New England, we find those of the Willard family. Benjamin Willard lived in Grafton, Mass., early in 1700. He had four sons who became expert clock makers, Benjamin Jr., Simon, Ephraim and Aaron.

Eli Terry, of Connecticut, has been called the "Father of American Clock Makers". His first clock, with wooden works, made in 1792 is still running and keeping good time.

We hear first of Seth Thomas in 1809. His company is still in existence. Elias Ingraham of Bristol originated the Gothic style clock, the best seller of any American design. Other makers are David Rittenhouse of Pennsylvania, Christopher Sower and William Davis. Wag on the Wall clocks were simply the works and face without a case and were among the first time pieces. The banjo cases are truly American. The oldest church clock in the United States is in the tower of St. Paul's chapel in New York City. It was built by an Englishman named John Thwaites in 1698. Watches are a much later conception than clocks. First called pocket clocks, they became popular during the reign of Queen Elizabeth in England. They were fashionable baubles possessed only by the wealthy. The oldest watch on exhibition was one that is owned by George Adkins, and was dated

Logan Elm Grange

The regular meeting of Logan Elm Grange was held Tuesday evening in Pickaway school with 50 members present.

David Sherwood, worthy master, was in charge of the business session. Following the meeting, memorial services were held in honor of 18 deceased members. The auditorium was beautifully decorated with flowers, with a large cross of flowers in the center. Mrs. John Miller sang the hymn, "The Old Rugged Cross", and as part of the service flowers were placed at the foot of the cross as the names of the deceased members were read by Mrs. Polly Kerns.

Readings were given by David Sherwood, Mrs. Eva Dresbach and Mrs. George Jury. The program was arranged by Loring Hill, and was a most impressive service. The next meeting will be a shadow party and a poke supper, and will be held Tuesday, June 1.

Child Conservation League

Mrs. B. W. Young, of Pickaway township, was guest speaker, Tuesday afternoon, at the meeting of the Child Conservation League held in the Library Trustees' room.

A short business session was conducted by Mrs. Ray Reid, vice president, in the absence of Mrs. Robert D. Musser, president. Following the business meeting, Mrs. Reid introduced Mrs. Young, who spoke on "Adolescence". She told of her experiences in dealing with children in the summer camp, which she conducts at her home in Pickaway township.

She mentioned three books which deal with parent responsibility to the child. All are in the WASHINGTON, May 19.—(UP)—Ohio industrial concerns have filled orders totaling $1,875,000 for materials and equipment at the Grand Coulee reclamation and power project, according to a report of the reclamation service submitted to congress today.

Most of the orders were placed by Mason, Walsh, Atkinson, Keiser Co., contractors on the gigantic Columbia river project. Orders totaling about $50,000 were placed directly by the government with Ohio firms. The figures were compiled up to Jan. 1.

Firms from which the contractors made purchases included: Timken Roller Bearing Co. of Canton; Fyr-Fyter Co. of Dayton; Thew Shovel Co. of Lorain; Marion Steam Shovel Co. of Quincy; Gardner-Denver Co. of Quincy and Republic Rubber Co. and Truscon Steel Co. of Youngstown.

ANTI-KIDNAPING BILL IS SIGNED

Governor Makes Such Act in Ohio Punishable By Death

COLUMBUS, May 19.—(UP)—Kidnaping in Ohio, when the person abducted is maimed or injured, will be punishable by death under provisions of the Di Salle act, signed by Governor Davey. The new law becomes effective in 90 days.

The measure also provides that when the kidnaped person is liberated unharmed prior to the trial of the abductor, the penalty shall be not less than 20 years imprisonment. The governor also signed five other bills and vetoed two last night. Those signed included:

Authorizing establishment of clinics and out patient hospitals for mentally afflicted not committed to state institutions, appropriating $21,000 for administrative expenses, but making no financial provision for the proposed clinics and hospitals.

The governor told a delegation representing the Probate Judges Association, which sponsored the bill, that he would ask the general assembly at the special session to enact the biennial budget, to include an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the purpose of financing the clinics.

Exempting police officers from liability for damages for injury or death caused by operation of a motor vehicle when making emergency calls in course of duty.

Requiring candidates nominated for office by writing in their names on ballots, to pay regular filing fees charged other candidates.

Requiring an agreement between the states of Pennsylvania and Ohio to govern the development and control of Pymatuning lake, and establishing hunting and fishing regulations thereon.

The governor vetoed a bill that would have prohibited operation of funeral homes except under the names of the person conducting the business, and another that

STAGE PROVIDES EERIE SCENE IN SENIORS' PLAY

An elaborate stage setting and unusual lighting effects will blend tonight with an able characterization of a cast of 15 members in making the Senior class play, "Wings of the Morning", one of the best dramatic presentations ever to be staged at Circleville high school.

The sets for the first act are scenes in the corners of three rooms in a large city. The arrangement creates an illusion of three phases of metropolitan life. Each scene is singled out with spot lights while the other rooms are in comparative darkness.

The scenes of the last two acts are in the council room of the mysterious house of Master Geoffrey, a wealthy philosopher who operates an experimental laboratory. The room is an austere and formal chamber in which the comfort of guests is given slight consideration. Heavily timbered walls which are without decoration dominate the chamber room of Gothic architecture. A flight of steps built into a low platform is used for the entrance into the room.

Dimming lights are used in the second and third acts to present a mysterious effect. The lighting devices used in Master Geoffrey's would prevent an employer from being made a party defendant in a divorce alimony proceeding and being enjoined from paying the defendant's salary unless an injunction has been issued.

house are operated by servants who takes the orders from the master. "Wings of the Morning" was written by Charles Quimby Burdette who was the author of "Shirt Sleeves," the junior class play which was presented in 1934.

ATHLETICS COME FROM BEHIND SECOND STRAIGHT DAY TO RETAIN LEAD

CHUB DEAN HITS FOUR-BASE BLOW TO EDGE TIGERS

Chandler, Rookie Yankee Star, Hands Chicago Calumine Dose

FELLER GETS IN GAME

Young Phenom Walks One, Then Goes to Bench

NEW YORK, May 19.—(UP)—The Philadelphia Athletics have ceased to be a joke. The team that lost 100 games last season and finished in the cellar, hangs on to the American league lead with grim seriousness.

Twice in the last two days the Athletics were licked going into the ninth. On Monday they came from behind to score two runs and whip the world champion Yankees, 3-2. Yesterday, they staged another eighth inning uprising to score three runs and pluck an 8-7 victory from Detroit. It was the fourth straight victory for the A's over the Tigers.

Cochrane Chided One of 74-year-old Connie Mack's rookies yelled at Manager Mickey Cochrane from the dugout: "Hey, Mickey, don't you wish you were back catching for Philadelphia?" That crack seems to have sized up the situation from all angles. The A's are clicking on all cylinders and making the most of their opportunities. The Tigers are floundering badly, playing only at a 500 gait.

Detroit led 7-5 when the A's came to bat in the eighth. Eldon Auker walked Marty Peters, hit Wally Moses with a pitched ball and then he fanned Bob Johnson. But Alfred Lovell (Chubby) Dean (no relation to Dizzy) hit a home run over the right field fence, and that punch decided the game. Frank Hayes, A's catcher, hit a homer with one man on in the fourth. Harry Kelley went the route, winning his third game. Spud Chandler, former University of Georgia football star, kept the Yankees at the A's heels—half a game separating them — by blanking the Chicago White Sox, 4-0. It was the sixth shutout of the American league season, the others being pitched by Stratton (2), Gill, Pearson, and Andrews. Lou Gehrig hit his second homer of the season. Ted Lyons pitched seven innings for the White Sox, allowing seven hits and being charged with the defeat.

Errors by Domenic Dallesandro, midget rookie outfielder, and Eric McNair in the ninth started a four-run rally enabling Cleveland to trim the Boston Red Sox, 7-4. The Indians used four pitchers in the ninth to head off a Red Sox rally. Bob Feller made his first appearance since he injured his arm, as a relief man, but was yanked after walking a man. Lyn Larry had a perfect day at bat, getting "4" for "4." Jimmy Foxx hit a homer with one man on.

Bowling News

Roy Beatty took first place in the Circleville Athletic Club's blind bowling tournament, Tuesday evening, when he kegged 597.

Scores rolled in Tuesday's activities included: R. Beatty, 184, 232, 181—597; J. Glitt, 204, 186, 135—525; D. Bach, 162, 182, 127—471; 135, 135, 131—401; R. Heistand, 149, 138, 162—449; M. Good, 205, 158, 126—459.

YESTERDAY'S HERO: Lovell (Chubby) Dean who hit a home run with two men aboard in the eighth to give the Athletics an 8-7 victory over the Tigers and retain their American league lead.

Louis Cardinals remained three and a half games apart when both won yesterday in the only two National league games not rained out.

MORRIS, OLYMPIC CHAMPION, QUILTS AMATEUR RANKS

HOLLYWOOD, May 19.—(UP)—Glenn Morris, world's decathlon champion, today joined the select group of former amateur athletes who have found their greater reward in the movies.

The former Denver automobile salesman announced that he was turning professional to make Tarzan pictures which will bring him $250,000 the next five years.

That completed the formalities. He signed the contract with principal pictures several weeks ago and already has made advertising scenes posing with apes. Dan Ferris, head of the A. A. U., gave him permission to take film tests without jeopardizing his amateur standing. Officially, Ferris has just heard about the contract Morris signed, and had warned him that if he complied with it, his amateur career would be ended. Morris made the standard reply:

"Much as I respect the AAU I can't go on living on watches and silver cups."

Thus he joined a colony of tennis, swimming, golf, football and ice skating stars who found this profitable market for their talents ahead of him.

Morris had keen competition for his new job. Several athletes were tested, including Lou Gehrig of baseball fame, who was not so convincing as a tree-slinger. He is to replace Johnny Weissmuller, the swimmer and original Tarzan of the movies; is scheduled to make two ape-man pictures a year and will begin work next month on "Tarzan's Revenge."

About This And That In Many Sports

By BILL BRAUCHER

Schmeling Training

NEW YORK, May 19.—Some of the boys have started a guessing bee concerning the strange antics of Mister Max Schmeling... With Heavyweight Champion Jimmy Braddock training at Grand Beach, Mich., to meet Joe Louis in Chicago on June 22, Max Schmeling continues blithely conditioning himself at Speculator, N. Y., with what is pronounced the intention of fighting Braddock, June 3, at Long Island City. ... The Broadway analysts' inference is that one of those lefts of Joe Louis landed on Schmeling, after all, and that its effects are just beginning to be felt... but Herr Schmeling never has been noted for being silly, and it's the wild guess of this department that he is training at Speculator really for not one fight but two... Is it far amiss to surmise that Schmeling will take on a warmup fight shortly after the moon on June 3 passes uneventfully over an empty Long Island bowl... and then in September tackle winner of the Braddock-Louis bout? ...

Stage to Be Set

... Naturally the Garden doesn't want to announce now that Schmeling's opponent for the June warmup fight has been selected... that would be a public expression of failure of the Braddock-Schmeling negotiations for June 3, and those negotiations are still pursuing the legal tenor of their ways... but after June 3, the Garden probably will issue a snappy statement to the effect that since Braddock failed to appear in Long Island Bowl to box with Schmeling, another fight will be sought for the German. ...

Breaks Aid Tommy

... Not often does a young ball player fall heir to such a series of good breaks as Tommy Henrich, new left fielder of the Yankees, has received... back in 1933 Tommy was playing softball in Canton, O., when the team disbanded he started playing hard ball for the first time... now he is playing regularly as a member of the world's champion team. The first break was when a scout for the Tigers went to Canton to inspect a pitcher named Dye... the scout liked Henrich better than Dye, but did not sign him at once... later that year, Henrich was scouted by Bill Bradley of the Indians, and signed to play... the Indians farmed him until this year when he was transferred to Milwaukee... Billy Evans wrote a magazine piece calling Tommy a $15,000 ball player... so Henrich became curious and wrote to Judge Landis to find out just whose property he was, since Cleveland had farmed him three times, the limit under the baseball code. ...

Landis investigated, decided Cleveland was trying to cover up ownership of the young player, and declared him a free agent... on the strength of Billy Evans' recommendation, several teams offered Henrich a bonus for signing... Tom took the Yankee offer, reported to be between $20,000 and $25,000... Having no immediate need for his services, the Yanks decided to farm Henrich, but things began happening to Yankee outfielders as soon as Henrich was signed... Jake Powell came down with appendicitis, and the man from Canton was called in and given a uniform... in his first two games, Henrich rewarded his new bosses by driving in the runs that won. ...

NO CARD UNIMPORTANT

THERE IS no such thing as an unimportant card. Even the difference in size between a deuce and a trey can determine whether you make a contract or get set. Especially in the matter of entries, it is sometimes vital to preserve the smallest card in the deck so that it can be led across to the dummy.

teenth heart, discarding the two losing diamonds. The spade finesse worked, but, alas, he had no trump smaller than the 3 to get him into dummy again for a second sure finesse, so he lost a spade at the end.

Had the declarer looked ahead before carelessly trumping the heart Ace with his club 2, he would have used a high one. Thus sufficient entries could have been created in the dummy to provide for the setting up of the heart suit and for the two needed finesses in spades.

(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

East's opening bid was 1-Diamond, South bid 5-Clubs, West 5-Diamonds, South 6-Clubs, East 6-Diamonds and South 7-Clubs as an intended sacrifice, West doubling.

The heart Ace was led, and South trumped with the club 2. He next overtook the trump 10 with the J to lead a heart and ruff high. The club 5 to the 8 made an entry for a second heart ruff. The club 4 to the 7 furnished a third entry to play the K and the thir-

SCOUT LEADERS, CITIZENS URGED TO ATTEND MEETING TO PLAN CAMPAIGN

MONEY NEEDED TO RETAIN AID OF AREA OFFICE

Reed Shafer To Preside As Many Civic Leaders Gather in M. E. Church

PROGRESS IMPERATIVE

Bricker Heads Executive Board in Central Ohio

Troop leaders, committeemen, and local citizens interested in youth work generally will meet Thursday in the parlor of the Methodist church at 7:30 p. m. to organize a financial campaign on behalf of the Boy Scout movement in Circleville and Pickaway county. Reed Shafer, vice-chairman of the Pickaway district, will preside in the absence of James I. Smith, Jr., district chairman, who is out of the city.

The success or failure of this meeting will determine whether or not scouting under professional guidance and direction will continue here. Civic leaders, educators, ministers, parents and others who approve of this popular youth movement are not only invited, but urged to attend.

Other Counties Share

Pickaway county is the only one of the eight counties of the Central Ohio Area Council, Boy Scouts of America, which did not share the expense of maintaining the Council during the last year. Campaigns are under way this month in every district to enroll sustaining members and obtain funds for another year. Local citizens, including Smith, Shafer, Ed Ebert, George McDowell, Robert Terhune, Dwight Steele, Dr. G. D. Phillips, Frank Fischer, Karl Herrmann, Carl Leist, Frank Barnhill, the Rev. H. A. Sayre, and several others have indicated a desire to see Circleville and surrounding communities do their part in raising money at this time.

The executive board of the Central Ohio Area Council, of which John W. Bricker is president, controls the expenditure of all funds. Both Smith and Shafer, representing the Pickaway district, are members of this board. The council maintains an office, where all records are kept, and information on scouting may be obtained, in addition to providing trained professional leaders who work closely with the scores of volunteer leaders who serve boys as district officials and troop leaders.

Although most of the expense of operating the Area Council is paid by the Columbus Community Fund, each district contributes to some extent in order that field work will not be limited to the metropolitan area. By the use of the area council plan, scouting is one of the most economically administered social agencies in the country.

Seven County Troops

At the present time there are seven troops in the Pickaway district, three of which are in Circleville. Scouting is a leisure time program of character training and citizenship building activities designed to supplement the church, home and school. Institutions, using their own leaders, use scouting for their own boys. Any boy, twelve years of age or older may become a scout.

JOHN TEETS, 24, NEIGHBOR, KILLS WELDON J. BABB

Young Perry Township Tenant Defends Wife of Deceased Man

he picked up one of his slippers and started beating her.

She ran from the house toward the Teets home. On the way, Babb knocked her down in a ditch and kicked her, she told the sheriff.

After allegedly beating his wife, Babb returned to his home, obtained his automobile and, with one of his children in the car, drove to the Teets residence, stopping his car in the front yard with its lights burning.

Babb was waving a nickel-plated flashlight, the sheriff was told, and shouted he was going in the house and "kill them all."

Flashlight Mistaken

Persons in the Teets home thought he was carrying a pistol as the flashlight was not lighted. Radcliff said Teets obtained the shotgun and was standing inside the home as Babb approached.

Teets fired the two shots and Babb fell after taking about three steps, Radcliff said. Death was sudden. His body was about 20 feet from the home.

The sheriff was told the Teets family had lived on the farm about two months. They previously had lived there, then moved, and Babb persuaded them to return.

John Teets, the parents said, went to the home of relatives in the neighborhood Tuesday night after the shooting. He was not questioned by officers, Tuesday night, but was to be questioned Wednesday.

Mrs. Babb told Radcliff she urged Teets to shoot.

C. E. Hill, Williamsport funeral director, notified Sheriff Radcliff about the shooting. The body was removed to the Hill funeral home.

Sheriff Radcliff said on several occasions Babb had made reports to him that his stock was being poisoned, but nothing could ever be developed from the reports.

Live on U. S. Property

The Babb residence on the former David Porter farm, later owned by an insurance company, and now owned by the government for its Rural Resettlement project. The farm is on the Locust Grove road.

Weldon Jennings Babb was born Sept. 7, 1904 in Clarksburg, a son of Albert and Ida Goldsberry Babb, now residents of Greenfield. He married Bertha Hulse on Sept. 1, 1926.

The parents, his widow, and three children, Richard W., Mary Joan, and Betty Jean, and a brother, Francis Babb, of Utica, survive. The funeral will be Friday at 2 p. m. at the home with the Rev. D. H. Householder officiating. Burial will be in Springlawn cemetery by C. E. Hill.

The body will be removed to the Babb home where friends may view it after 6 p. m. Thursday.

125 Pay Glowing Tribute To Rev. Toensmeier, Wife

GEORGIA CAT SELECTS STRANGE BIRTHPLACES

MARIETTA, Ga., May 19.—(UP)—Kitty, a whimsical cat owned by Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Wellons and noted for the unusual places she picks to introduce her frequent litters, today nursed triplets in a squirrel's nest.

Last March she established a temporary maternity ward in the bottom of a large brick column. It requested four days to rescue her with an improved net.

OBSERVERS SAY DEFEAT CERTAIN FOR COURT BILL

voted the reorganization bill down yesterday.

Congressional tempers are shortening. The surprising committee refusal to adopt some compromise plan for the discarded presidential bill was attributed partly to resentment against threats of political reprisals against Democrats who oppose the president.

Some of Mr. Roosevelt's leaders appeared to be moving toward compromise in the hottest dispute Washington has seen in years, and there are backers of a strategy of delay to defeat court expansion altogether.

Justice Van Devanter will retire two weeks from today, the day after the court recesses for the summer. He will receive $20,000 annually for life and no economy program ever will be able to reduce his pay.

Van Devanter's retirement announcement is accepted here to mean that the court has decided pending social security cases. The "ears-to-the-ground" brigade believes the decisions will be favorable to that legislation. The opinions could be ready Monday or at the last meeting of this session, June 1.

LANCASTER WILL PERMIT SPEECH, SAYS C. I. O. CHIEF

LANCASTER, May 19.—(UP)—John Owens, Ohio director of the Committee for Industrial Organization, today had assurance of Lancaster city officials and a citizens' committee that he may speak in the city if he chooses.

Owens protested the barring of George De Nucci and Avery Dennis, C. I. O. field organizers, from the city last Sunday. They were forced to turn back to Columbus by police who met them at the city limits while they were on their way to speak at a meeting of Hocking Glass Co. workers here.

At a two-hour conference with Mayor Charles E. Moyer, Police Chief Gail Sessler and 10 members of the citizens' committee, Owens asked "whether constitutional guarantees of free assemblage and free speech mean anything in Lancaster."

letter "P" represented preaching the word of God; "A" represented aid to the afflicted, sick and discouraged; "S", service to his church and his community; "T" tolerance with sinners, youth; "O" obligations to the church, and "R", a righteous individual. "The word means Rev. Toensmeier," he said.

Pastors Add Respects

The Rev. Herman S. Sayre paid tribute to the pastor and his wife and wished them "golden days ahead." "It has been fine for folk like us to have folk like you," said the Rev. T. C. Harper. Best wishes of the colored folk of the city were expressed at the meeting by Mary Lou Henderson and Fred Scott.

"I'll have to look in a mirror to see if it's myself," the Rev. Mr. Toensmeier said. "We never work alone, and the work we have done has been in cooperation with Circleville people. The work I have done here would never have been accomplished without the fine assistance of Mrs. Toensmeier. She has been my critic.

"All the fellowship, friendship and experiences here are so deeply rooted we shall never forget them."

Mrs. Toensmeier was presented with a beautiful bouquet from the Brehmer greenhouses.

The program ended with a paper of tribute and appreciation read by Fred C. Clark. "If the good deeds of Rev. Toensmeier were put down on an accounting sheet it would look like a war debt," he said.

S. G. Rader, master of ceremonies for the affair, was introduced by the Rev. L. C. Sherburne.

Music Provided

Music was furnished by a quartet consisting of Mrs. Melvin Yates, Miss Eleanor Snyder, Franklin Price and Adrian Yates. Miss Abbe Mills Clark was accompanist. In addition to the numbers by the quartet, Miss Snyder and Mr. Price sang several duets.

Fred Clark lead group singing and Frank Lynch acted as marshal to see that everyone took part.

The Rev. Mr. Sherburne, chairman of the affair, expressed appreciation to Miss Marjorie Brown and Mr. Clark for assistance in plans.

BECKETT ELECTED

TOLEDO, May 19.—(UP)—G. F. Beckett, Hamilton, was elected governor of district 13-b at the annual convention of the Ohio state association of Lions clubs here yesterday. He defeated Senator Verner E. Metcalf, Marietta, zone directors elected included: Lee Andrews, zone 2 and R. B. Thorpe, Washington Court House, zone 3.

YEAR CONTRACTS VOTED

Question of Salaries To Be Determined Later

All teachers now employed in the Circleville school system were voted new contracts Tuesday evening when the board of education met at the high school.

According to present indications, few changes will occur in the roster for the next school year. Mrs. Lloyd Jones (Dorothy Jones), Miss Marjorie Priest, and Miss Alice Phillips did not seek re-election. Mrs. Jones, teacher of French in the high school, has been replaced by Loren L. Pace, of Roseville, and Miss Grace L. Teegardin, of Duval, has been named to succeed Miss Priest as teacher of music. No one has been appointed to replace Miss Phillips, who has been teaching in the Walnut street second grade.

Fischer Recommends All
The entire roster was approved by the board after recommendation by Supt. Frank Fischer, who also was rehired. All teachers are given one-year contracts, while the length of Mr. Fischer's will be determined at the next board meeting on June 1.

The question of salaries will be considered prior to the next board session. Very little revision is possible, the board believes, because of the condition of the state's funds.

The board decided to interview the architect concerning several changes in the new addition plan, one of which concerned widening of the stage as urged by the Monday Club.

Roster Disclosed

The teachers re-employed Tuesday were:

A new "education", started in New York today, is conceded little chance of reaching Circleville.

The Gotham board of education injected "jazz" music into the high school music course, believing pupils should understand it as well as the classical compositions. Jazz and "swing" orchestra leaders, including Benny Goodman, Rudy Vallee, Duke Ellington, Wayne King, George Gerahwin, Leo Reisman and Red Nichols have agreed to give weekly lectures in all city high schools.

BOSTON, Mass., May 19—(UP)—Miss Ruth Baumgardner, 22, Ohio Wesleyan university student, missing since May 1, was found by police at the Hotel Brunswick here today.

The young woman, who had registered as "Dr. V. R. Maher" said that the severe strain of four years of college work had forced her "to escape from myself."

Miss Baumgardner, a comely blonde, said that out of $200 she had borrowed from her sorority she had only 51 cents left. She said she had traveled through Cleveland, Buffalo and Albany.

Police wired Ohio Wesleyan officials for further information about her.

SPRINGFIELD, May 19—(UP)—Donald Trout, 22, a student at Ohio university, Athens, today was reported to have been missing for four days by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Prout of near-by Plattsburg.

Pastors of Many Churches Participate in Dinner Given in Honor of Highly-Respected Couple

Circleville bid farewell to two christian friends Tuesday evening, expressed appreciation for their 11 years of outstanding service to the community, and bid them Godspeed for the future.

Approximately 125 persons attended a complimentary dinner in the New American Hotel coffee shop honoring the Rev. and Mrs. Emil S. Toensmeier. The Rev. Mr. Toensmeier's resignation as pastor of the Presbyterian church becomes effective June 1.

The dinner was sponsored by Circleville members of the county ministerial association. It was attended by pastors and laymen of all churches, and friends.

Kilpatrick's Tribute
The program included brief complimentary remarks by local and visiting pastors and laymen. Dr. W. B. Kilpatrick, Greenfield, former moderator of the Columbus Presbytery, paid tribute to the Rev. Mr. Toensmeier as an "invaluable presbyter, a wise counselor, a man of strength, a tried and approved friend."

The Rev. L. M. Patterson, Plain City, clerk of the presbytery, said the Rev. Mr. Toensmeier had played an important part in the business affairs of the presbytery and would be greatly missed. He expressed appreciation to the community for honoring the couple.

J. W. Johnson, retired editor, read a paper of tribute to the honored guests, and wished them a most pleasant future.
"We appreciated you as neighbors," Dr. Rev. G. J. Troutman, of the Lutheran church, said. "We will miss your splendid countenances. Although we can not see the fruits of our work now, I assure you your work here has not been in vain. We appreciate what you have done for our town."

More Resignations From Tribunal Possible As Van
Devanter Quits

SO LONS REBELLIOUS

Reprisal Warning Brings
Reversal of Compromises

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON, May 19—(UP)—An angry senate rebellion and the possibility of further supreme court retirements moved President Roosevelt's court reorganization plan to the brink of defeat today.

Mr. Roosevelt stood pat against compromise.

But the possibility of further vacancies on the high bench, either by retirement or death, tended to bolster the courage of those Democrats who would welcome almost any escape from a showdown vote on expansion of the court. Their strategy is delay.

More Resignations Sought

Some of Mr. Roosevelt's leaders conceded that he would drop the plan if two more conservatives joined Associate Justice Willis Van Devanter in retirement. It appeared to non-partisan observers that one more retirement would junk the expansion bills.

Administration "brain trusters" confident that some of the "objectives" of Mr. Roosevelt's judiciary plan will be achieved, immediately enlarged their legislative program for this session. They completed bills embracing control of national resources and regulation of wages and hours in industry and planned to revive proposals to reorganize the executive branch of the government.

A court more favorable to New Deal social and economic objectives, however, is assured when the next term begins in October. The appointment of Van Devanter's successor will achieve that. But the sudden supreme court vacancy does not relieve the president of the urgent problem of handling a turbulent senate.

The senate judiciary committee is in open rebellion against Mr. Roosevelt and has rejected all compromise proposals. The committee (Continued on Page Eight)

James Ray suffered numerous cuts on the face, forehead and cuts and bruises on the right leg. Mrs. Ray suffered abrasions on the head. Pearl Ray was cut on the face and had a wrist sprained. They were treated by Dr. E. L. Montgomery at Berger hospital, then released.

Pearl Ray, driver of the car, said he went to sleep. The group was returning home after a trip to Huntington, W. Va., Mr. and Mrs. James Ray formerly lived there and had returned for some of their possessions. The car was demolished.

Robert Pickens, Watt street, and Donald Eitel, S. Scioto street, escaped with bruises Tuesday afternoon when the former's car overturned four times on a road near Grove City. The were returning to Circleville from the Beulah Park races.

Mr. Pickens swerved his car to avoid striking a car backing out on the highway.

DUKE AND WALLY
SIGN CONTRACT
FOR MARRIAGE

MONTS, France, May 19—(UP)—The Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield will maintain separate financial resources after their marriage and not "pool" their goods and assets as is customary under French law, it was revealed today.

The marriage contract signed by the Duke and Mrs. Warfield, now in possession of Dr. Charles Mercier, mayor of Monts, provides for a "separation of goods" not in accordance with the usual French community law. The law provides that the wife's possessions pass to her husband immediately after marriage.

Mrs. Warfield will not have to promise to obey the duke, it was understood, and he will not have to promise to support her.

An official announcement said that Mayor Mercier would perform the ceremony in the chateau at noon on June 3.

A mysterious woman, claiming to be a Hungarian countess, who has pursued the Duke of Windsor for years and has written hundreds of letters urging him not to marry, has appeared at Cannes, announcing her determination to see him if he passes through there.

She started pestering the duke at Cannes several years ago, sending him flowers until she was arrested as a nuisance. She followed him to Austria and was deported.

CLINTON COUNTY

MISSING 13 DAYS

WILMINGTON, May 19—(UP)—Russell Gotherman, 33, an ex-convict, was held in the Clinton county jail here today on charges of kidnapping Frank J. Schofield, 78, wealthy recluse who resided near Wilmington.

County and city officials, aided by Civilian Conservation Corps workers, searched the Schofield farm at Clarksville for clues which might reveal the whereabouts of Schofield who disappeared on May 6.

Ora Slater, Cincinnati private detective, was employed by the city and county in an effort to "crack the case." Slater questioned Gotherman last night, but the latter denied knowledge of what happened to Schofield.

Authorities said Gotherman made conflicting statements.

D. W. Haynie, 33, reputed slot machine collector, also was reported missing here today. He disappeared Monday after telephoning his wife he would be home for dinner. He is the father of three children.

JOHN TEETS, 24,

WELDON J. BABB

Young Perry Township

Deceased Man

QUARREL ENDS FATALLY

Sheriff Makes No Arrest
Pending Investigation

Weldon J. Babb, 32, Perry township farmer and father of three children, was shot and killed Tuesday night by John Teets, 24, unmarried son of Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Teets, tenants on the farm operated by Babb.

Babb was shot in the stomach and head by two charges from a 10-gauge double barrel shotgun. The shooting occurred at this Teets home, a quarter of a mile from the Babb residence. It took place after a family quarrel during which Mrs. Babb was severely beaten. She had sought refuge from her husband in the home of the tenants.

No arrest had been made Wednesday morning pending further investigation of the case by Sheriff Charles Radcliff, Prosecutor George E. Gerhardt and Coroner C. E. Bowers.

Sheriff Radcliff said he was notified about three hours after the shooting.

Mrs. Babb Beaten

Teets had left his home to go to the residence of relatives, the sheriff said, and Mrs. Babb was severely beaten she was not in a condition for questioning.

Coroner Bowers had returned no verdict in the case Wednesday morning. He was uncertain when it would be announced. The coroner and Sheriff Radcliff said they believed Babb became enraged.

Sheriff Radcliff said the family quarrel started in the Babb home at supper time. He was told Babb had been "acting queerly," and when he appeared at the home for his evening meal started complaining with his wife, Bertha, about the food that had been prepared.

He demanded either fish or veal for supper, the sheriff was told, and Mrs. Babb offered to get it for him if he would give her the money. She told the sheriff he became enraged, went to the kitchen and started throwing articles off the table. The sheriff learned that on the previous evening Babb had severely beaten his wife.

Retired to Bed

After his actions in the kitchen, Babb asked his wife to heat some water for him. She complied. He then undressed and went to bed. Later he sent one of his children to the Teets home to have John Teets go to Williamsport to buy him some supper.

Mrs. Babb told the sheriff her husband asked for more warm water and during another argument (Continued on Page Eight)

Salesmen Interesting
Out in the West where the tall corn grows is a state called Iowa. We met a youngster from out there today, a salesman, and this makes about a dozen of them we have "taken down the line" in the last ten days, but of course not all from Iowa. And every last one of 'em up to this time, has turned out good, just fine in fact, and this chap we met today was as good as the best of them. He talked chicken, because it is his business to appoint agencies in 26 counties of this state to sell food remedies for most every ill the poultry family is heir to. Being interested in chickens because we used to roast them quite often out beside a blazing fire in the woods, we were prepared to talk chicken. His 26 counties include southeastern Ohio and he says maybe Iowa can beat us on tall corn but when it comes to hills we're it. But believe it or not he says he has some fine dealers who sell lots of their remedies right down there in the hills. This courteous and kindly salesman we are telling you about is Leon Cole, Waterloo, Iowa. Says he has been in Ohio four months and can't say that he likes it very well.

Light Revamped

vice this light renders cannot be excelled.

Street Discussed

According to clerk Leon Taylor, council Monday night, other than pay bills, did a lot of discussing. It is imperative that something must be done with East Main street. But just what is the question in discussion. From what Mr. Taylor said an engineer will likely be employed to establish lines and grades. And this done, an estimate can be made as to the cost of the improvement. "It will take a lot of money to fix that street as it should be," he said.

Many at School

Quite a few of the Ashville ladies attended the cooking school at Commercial Point. If one can estimate the success of this cooking school by the way the Scioto township people always "put across" their Homecomings, it will go over in a big way.

First Class Recalled

Now that the local schools have but a few more days yet to go, a list of the teachers, especially the superintendents would be in order. The first Ashville high class to graduate was composed of Ella Morrison, Gertrude Tregarlin, Wilbur Hoffines and Orville Newton. The first two of the class are deceased. Wilbur Hoffines is a Columbus dentist and Orville Newton is with the Hedges Lumber Co. The class graduated in 1896, with Clinton B. Shook, superintendent.

Ashville School

There are four boys and girls in the second grade who have been neither absent nor tardy during the school year. They are Jim Irwin, Lloyd McManes, Cleoria Myers and Dick Pettibone. Frank Ray has missed only one half a day.

Twelve pupils in the second grade will receive Ohio Pupils Reading Circle Certificates. They are Donna Jean Hallam, Raquel Chamberlain, Jim Irwin, Jerry Brown, Cleoria Myers, Bobby Lindsey, Roline Harris, Estell Lee LeMaster, Lois Johnston, Bob Pettibone, Conrad Johnson, Nell Murphy and Lloyd McManes.

Our Canary Class in reading have read besides their Elson reader, nine supplementary readers.

There are thirteen people from the fourth grade who have received the Ohio reading circle diplomas. There are 13 certificates to be given.

We have six new books. Their names are Rex, Carmen of the Gold Coast, Four Great Americans, Four Great Inventors, Hans Brinker and the Junkie Book.

The high school board of education met in regular session Monday evening of this week and transacted the following business: Paid bills; decided to hold baccalaureate services in the M. E. Church, instead of the school building, as has been the custom in the past; arranged to have all typewriters repaired and cleaned during the summer; voted to have some rooms refurnished; and re-elected the entire teaching staff except Mr. Spence, English teacher, who had submitted a written statement that he did not care to be considered an applicant for reelection.

Duke's Loyal Friends Expected at Marriage

LONDON, May 19.—(UP)—A small group of loyal friends of the Duke of Windsor will go to Monts, France, June 3 to attend his wedding to Mrs. Wallis Warfield for whom he gave up his throne, it was announced today.

"There will be about 20 guests from England, all personal friends of the duke," said Lieut. Dudley Forwood, his permanent equerry who came here with papers connected with the wedding.

"They will go as friends, not in any official capacity."

Since his arrival yesterday, Forwood has visited many of the duke's friends.

A few of these, alone among the millions who cheered the duke as king, will join those from the continent who will make up the wedding party at the Chateau de Candé where the duke and Mrs. Warfield are staying.

Government Victor

There was no further doubt that King George VI had deferred to the government in agreeing that no member of the royal family should go to Monts and, by attendance at the ceremony, give royal or official countenance to the wedding which government and church so fiercely opposed before the abdication.

Announcement of the duke's wedding day was but a brief sensation in London.

What talk there is centers, in higher circles, not on the wedding itself but on the day selected—the birthday of the late King George V, Windsor's father, who himself sternly reproved the duke for his association with Mrs. Warfield, then the wife of Ernest Simpson.

The discussion was this, and opinion seemed equally divided: whether by selecting his father's birthday for his wedding the duke had offended good taste or made a gesture of friendship to his father's memory.

But the view seemed to be, in high circles and low, that if the duke must marry Mrs. Warfield, the sooner it was over and forgotten the better. There was no disposition to keep his name in mind, and even the announcement of his wedding date yesterday got no more newspaper space than did the story his brother-successor George VI would drive in state to the old "city" today to lunch with the lord mayor.

CHICK CHATS

There is an old breeding law that "like begets like". The pullets you raise, the meat birds you secure, will be no better than their dads and mothers! The male transmits much of his quality to the pullet chick and that is why you must be sure your chicks come from matings using high powered male birds from long production lines and of magnificent vigor and inherited livability.

There are two general branches of poultry keeping, commonly called "production" and "fancy". The production classes are rapidly increasing for several reasons.

The average farm flock owner does not need to know very much about such American Poultry qualifications as plucked hocks, webbed feet, more or less than four toes on either foot, legs or feet of color foreign to the breed, a wing showing clipped flights or secondaries or both, reformed beaks, and numerous other negative factors that might be applied to fancy poultry. But here are some of the things that are of big interest to you: hens with high hatchability, low mortality, rapid growth, early feathering, early maturity, and George Shelton, comedians; the New Yorkers chorus; and the orchestra directed by Robert Emmet Dolan.

GRACE MOORE SINGS
An aria from the opera "Manon" is the featured number to be sung by Grace Moore in her program over the Columbia network on Saturday, May 22 at 8 p. m. (EST). The aria is "Oh That It Were So" and the role is one of Grace Moore's best known.

Other numbers which she will sing in this program are Marie Antoinette's Song and "Bells of St. Mary's". The Marie Antoinette Song is seldom heard on the air.

Vincent Lopez' piano solo will be "Everything I Have Is Yours." Orchestra numbers include "Lull in My Life," "Turn Off the Moon," "Swing High, Swing Low" and "Carelessly."

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT'S APPROVAL FORECAST SOON

Additional Retirement Of Justices Hinted After Van Devanter's Move

SUCCESSOR IN DOUBT

Adverse Decision Certain to Bring Rehearing

WASHINGTON, May 19—(UP)—Supreme court approval of the New Deal's Social Security act within the next two weeks was forecast today by examination of factors surrounding the retirement of Justice Willis Van Devanter from the bench.

Speculation also centered on possible additional retirements—regarded as a practical certainty within the next few months—the name of Van Devanter's successor and the effect this successor will have on the court's attitude toward New Deal and other legislation.

It was generally believed that President Roosevelt would name Van Devanter's successor quickly. That he will select for the vacancy a person whose qualifications are above question but whose ideals favor the New Deal was thought certain. Some believed search for such a nominee would impel the president to appoint a jurist now serving in one of the lower courts.

Appointments Watched
The impelling motive in picking a distinguished lower court judge would be to effect on the court plan. Many who oppose the plan have employed the argument new jurists appointed under the court plan would be too radical.

Hunt Pistol in Taylor Quiz

AS LOS ANGELES officials pushed a new investigation into the 15-year-old slaying of the film director, William Desmond Taylor, a tiny pearl-handled pistol that once belonged to Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, mother of Mary Miles Minter, former screen star and sweetheart of Taylor, was hunted as a possible clew. Mrs. Shelby, left, shown with Miss Minter on their way to testify before the grand jury, said the pistol was a toy.

by nature too subservient to the White House.

Belief that Van Devanter's retirement may presage a New Deal victory in the four pending social security act test cases was based on several factors.

During its present term the court has not ruled a single time against the administration. To do so in the security act cases might work substantially against the court's prestige at the present moment.

This is true because of an unusual factor in the status of the test cases, involving the validity of state and federal unemployment insurance laws and of old age pensions. They will probably be decided either next Monday or on June 1, the last two meeting days of the court term.

Because the decision comes at the term end, an adverse five to four verdict might stand only during the summer months. The government probably could obtain a rehearing by the tribunal next fall, when Van Devanter's successor will undoubtedly be on the bench.

Reversals Condemned

If the successor were of the "liberal" group, he would undoubtedly vote for a rehearing and for the validity of the laws. This would amount to a complete reversal by the court within a period of a few months. Such reversals have been heartily condemned by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes as dangerous for the prestige of the court so he would undoubtedly do all that he could to avoid the possibility of such an event.

BOY, 3, STRIKES AND KILLS HIS INFANT SISTER

NEW YORK, May 19 — (UP)—The jealousy of three-year-old Noel Galvin, of a new baby in the family was blamed today for the death of his two-month-old sister.

Unaware of the tragedy and oblivious of what would be a crime if he were four years older, the toddler readily admitted that he had hit his sister.

"Did you hit your little sister with this?" (Holding a toy airplane) Police Lieutenant Harry Bilms asked him.

"Yes."
"With this?" (holding a toy truck).
"Yes."
"With this ball?"
"Yes."

Police believed that there was no doubt that Noel had hit his sister while she slept in her carriage. No one else was in the room. Bloodstains were found on his hand and blouse. But the death was recorded as accidental as no action can be taken against a child under seven years of age.

The children's mother, Mrs. Joseph Galvin, found the baby in convulsions yesterday. She had been out of the room for only a few minutes. She died within a few minutes of a fractured skull.

Noel was not disturbed. He was playing when police arrived. He became tremendously excited. "Look at all the visitors," he shrieked.

Bilms said that a toy airplane

Woman Asks Death For Killing Daughter

RIVERHEAD, N. Y., May 19—(UP)—Mrs. Helen Tiernan, 25-year-old blonde, sallow widow prayed today that death would be the penalty for killing her blue-eyed, 7-year-old daughter, Helen. Between sobs, she begged for "just one peep" at her son, Jimmy, 4, who survived her murderous attack.

Suffolk county authorities placed a guard outside her cell to prevent any attempt at suicide, while plans were made for a trial next month.

Mrs. Tiernan struck Helen with a hatchet, slit her throat and set fire to her clothing—and tried to kill Jimmy in the same manner—because they stood in the way of her love for George Christopoulos, swarthy Greek restaurant steward and former boxer.

"I want to plead guilty," she told Justice of the Peace Donald W. Shore in the town hall at Patchogue, N. Y.

Under New York state law, no court can accept such a plea to a charge of first degree murder.

"But I am guilty," she insisted. It was only after several minutes of persuasion that she agreed to change her plea.

Then she was led away, her face hidden in the folds of her cream-colored coat. A crowd of several hundred persons, mostly women, stared in silence.

The man she loved—loved so deeply that she tried to sacrifice her children to make room for him in her small apartment—was held as a material witness. She had absolved him of any part in the crime, after recanting an earlier confession which had implicated him.

"They (police) told me George was married to somebody else," she said. "They kept telling me things he said about me. They made me so angry I said George helped me do it. But he didn't."

It was little Jimmy's baby prattle that gave police a picture of what had happened in the woods near Brookhaven, N. Y., last Saturday morning while the children planned a gay picnic. From a lunch basket, Mrs. Tiernan drew a hatchet. While Jimmy looked on, terror-stricken, his sister's head was crushed, her throat was cut with a pair of scissors, and she fell, moaning, to the ground.

The boy turned to run, but his mother—described by her neighbors as "a wonderful woman"—grabbed him and again wielded the hatchet. A bread knife made a four-inch gash in his throat.

Mrs. Tiernan said she poured gasoline over Helen's body and set fire to child's clothing. Gasoline was spilled on Jimmy, but it was not ignited.

and truck were found near the baby's carriage. They were made of sheet metal and had many sharp corners. The baby's face was bruised and her right eye was blackened.

TRAINING RULES BELITTLED

KENT, (UP)—Donald "Rosy" Starn, head football coach at Kent State University, believes most training rules are ridiculous, because not one out of a hundred men observes them strictly.

SENATOR BILBO, WIFE IN COURT, ASKING DIVORCE

POPLARVILLE, Miss., May 19—(UP)—The Bilbos — Senator Theodore and Mrs. Linda Gaddys — transferred their marital difficulties to this Mississippi town today where public marital discord is all but unknown and the divorce is as much a rarity as a Republican.

In consequence the town was packed for the public airing of a situation that has been a matter for gossip throughout the state for years. The entire Pearl river bar was acting as counsel for the senator who once had ambitions to "out Huey Huey Long" and who is a Baptist minister and was three times governor.

Mrs. Bilbo, in her turn, had subpoenaed most of the state's political figures who have all known the Bilbos for years, and, presumably, will be asked to substantiate her charge that Bilbo had been unfaithful to her.

The senator, his famous diamond stick-pin gleaming in his cravat and waving airily to his political friends and frowning at his enemies, was asking Chancellor Ben Stevens to hear his evidence that Mrs. Bilbo had subjected him to "cruel and inhuman" treatment. Mrs. Bilbo was asking that he transfer the case to Jackson where she lived for 14 years, mostly while her husband was governor. Her divorce suit is a counter one to Bilbo's original action.

MOST PEOPLE who have made a study of motor cars will tell you that today's biggest dollar value is the Packard 120.
Today you can get this big, roomy straight-eight Packard—a real Packard inside and out, with Packard's characteristic long mechanical life and Packard's enduring identity—at an astonishingly low price.
But—this season may be your last chance to buy so much fine car for so little money!
For, with the cost of labor and materials already at much higher levels, increased prices for cars seem inevitable. It is only because Packard has been unusually well equipped to build cars economically that we've been able to give you such a sensational value for so long.

So—our earnest advice is, come in and drive the Packard 120 now. You'll find it offers genuine and thrilling Packard performance and quality. You'll see figures which will open your eyes to the ease with which the car can be bought—and you'll see proof that the Packard 120 is without doubt the most economical car of its size in America to operate!
But please don't put it off too long if you want to save yourself money!

PADLOCKING A CAMPUS

THE American Federation of Teachers charges there is a lack of academic freedom at Yale. On what grounds does the federation base its charge. Just this: That the university, or its responsible authorities, denied Senator Gerald P. Nye an opportunity to address the students, and that in 1933, while Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora, of New York, was acting as special counsel to the Senate Committee on Banking he was refused a meeting place because his work had taken on the character of a "sensational side show."

These items were brought to light by the federation in investigating the dismissal of Dr. Jerome Davis, an associate professor of Yale Divinity School. The investigators charged that Dr. Davis was threatened with dismissal if he did not withdraw the invitation to Senator Nye.

This manifestation of an anti-liberal policy does not necessarily mean that the progress of the country will be thwarted nor that the rights of free speech, assembly and press will be abrogated. But it is not out of place at this time to point out to Yale that liberalism is not an unworthy symbol to embrace. The university authorities need only look across the waters to countries where academic freedom is a myth, simply because those in power permitted themselves to be dragged down into the mud of blind thinking.

50,000 DOOMED TO DIE

THE National Safety Council reports 8,500 traffic deaths in the first quarter of 1937, an increase of 26 per cent over the same period last year. If this rate of human destruction is maintained, with the normal increases for the busy Summer months, about 50,000 persons will die in automobile accidents during the year.

If we knew in advance that 50,000 lives were to be wiped out during the year by war or fire or flood, or almost any cause aside from those that are normal, we would be stirred to the depths by fear and anxiety. The doom of 50,000 motorists is accepted with amazing indifference, due to the fact that such a slaughter has become commonplace. And it has become commonplace because we are complacent.

When we bear down on the potential killers behind the wheel there will be a different story. When we throw the speeders and reckless drivers and drunks into jail and bar the incompetents from the highways, there will not be 50,000 deaths a year from motor accidents.

The case of Hitler is more serious than we believed. It is reported that he actually believes his own nonsense.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:

Up to another cold day of rain and to hear repeated questions of "Will Summer ever arrive?" Everything happens eventually, warm weather being no exception. Breakfast near the fire and then out and about the paves, finding everywhere an interest in the condition of George Forast with all citizens expressing sincere desire for his quick recovery.

Here comes Elmer Reger with tickets for the play at the high school Friday night and there goes Ed Mason, who has been named on the Chamber of Commerce committee that will seek to settle the light rate controversy. Chatted with Pete Connor, who was born and reared in the county, but who for a quarter of a century has been living in Texas. Here on a vacation and spending part of it watching the horses run at Beulah park. Pete says that a race track scene always reminds him of Christmas. "Half the people jocular and the others going about with wry faces."

There's Catherine Brown, who has fully recovered from the effects of a pint of raw alcohol. The alcohol was in a bottle, fell from a high shelf at the Galleria store where she is employed, and knocked her unconscious. Even gave her a headache. First time ever did hear of alcohol that remained in a bottle hurting anyone. Heard that a farmer south of the village is charging $1 a day per person for the right to fish on his farm. Have fished those waters on several occasions and if all the fish did catch there were sold at $1,000 a pound would not have been able to raise enough cash to pay the fee for one day. Probably the farmer objects to fishermen of the thoughtless class trampling his crops. And I don't blame him at all. Too many folk have absolutely no respect for the property of others.

See by the paper that Ohio bankers are assembling in Columbus to discuss, among other things the outlook for inflation. Most thoughtful men of means regard inflation as a certainty and have been shifting from paper to real investments for a year or more. When the dollar's value drops it will be much more satisfactory to have money invested in actual property that will retain its comparative value than in stocks or bonds that may be paid off at their face value in dollars worth much less than the dollars with which they were bought.

Ohio's death penalty kidnap law is now in effect with the signing by Martin L. And a good thing, too. Kidnapers should be introduced to the electrified chair. They learn there so much about sorrow and the value of human life. Of course the instruction is so practical that they get no personal benefit from it, but other improperly intentioned youths may learn by example.

That hissing and roaring sound is made by skyrocketing prices. A dollar will buy more today than it will tomorrow, so buying right now is wise — if you have the dollar. Most men of business declare more money is flowing through their tills now than a year ago, yet they are making less money. All of which may mean something, but if it don't then it will not be entirely out of step with most other things of the day.

CAREER BOYS FIND HEADACHE

WASHINGTON — Almost every day new grey hairs appear in the heads of the State Department boys as a result of the new Neutrality Act. They have taken over its enforcement from Attorney General Cummings, and they certainly wish they hadn't.

Chief headache is the collection of funds for the Spanish war by various organizations. This can be regulated under the Neutrality Act, but Spanish sympathizers have posed some stiff problems.

One is the query on what the State Department would do if a labor union dipped into its reserve funds and sent money to aid the Spanish Government. This would not be "collection" of funds, since they would be already collected.

Another is the inquiry of the State Department's position in case a collection should be taken up for the Spanish Government during a church service. Would the State Department rush in and arrest the pastor and deacons?

BISHOP ON HORSEBACK

As a matter of fact, one group friendly to Spain is maneuvering to force the State Department to arrest a prominent bishop, rabbi, or labor leader in order to create a test case on the collection of funds. They know that public opinion would boomerang against the career boys.

The law requires that in order to collect funds for either side in the Spanish war, you must have a license from the State Department. Any brother caught collecting funds from his sister without a license is subject to five years imprisonment.

Real fact is that the State Department, instead of regulating the big munitions dealers, have found itself in a predicament such that it will have to arrest entire labor unions and churches—if it is to enforce the law.

Funniest angle is that the law was written in the State Department.

UNWELCOME GUESTS

Those guest speakers sharing John Hamilton's Sunday night radio programs are not voluntary additions. They are forced on the G.O.P. National Chairman.

When Hamilton arranged the four weekly broadcasts (without consulting or notifying other Republican leaders), he announced that he would be the only speaker. The first Sunday night this was true. But thereafter, Hamilton divided his time with others.

The second week he divided with House Leader Bert Snell and Representative Charles A. Halleck of Indiana: last week with Senator H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and Representative Francis H. Case of South Dakota.

Reason for this change in plans was undercover pressure by the congressional leaders.

Hamilton is far from popular with this group. They not only dislike him personally but they have a low regard for his political talents. So when he sprang his broadcasting plan they went into a cold sweat for fear he would loose an attack on the President's court bill.

CHAPTER 54

CHARLES hesitated when the girl asked him point blank why he was so deep in the plot to obtain her money. Before he could speak Jacqueline went on, speaking to Charles from the dark room above his office:

"You couldn't help yourself, could you, Charles? Something or somebody had got you down, and you had to do what you were told."

"I'm not making excuses, Jacqueline."

"Something happened—years ago, perhaps—something tremendous that got you down, and you couldn't get up again. I spotted that when I first met you, Charles. Remember? If it wasn't drink, what was it?"

He was silent.

"Lutman?"

"Yes—Lutman."

"Well, go on, Charles."

"I got in a pretty sordid story, Jacqueline. I got in a mess—used money belonging to a client. Lutman got me out of it—lent me the money and got a paper out of me that admitted the whole thing. He has been holding it over my head ever since, threatening that if I didn't do every dirty job he wanted done he'd expose the whole business, get me struck off the rolls, and—well, there it is. I hadn't the pluck to face it. I was down, and I just hadn't the courage to get up."

"But you tried to get up, Charles," said the girl. "You didn't want me to sign that deed. You tried to persuade me not to, and you did all you could to stop my marrying Jim. That showed you were beginning to try to get up. And then you kidnapped me, and stood up to Lutman. That was because you were struggling a little harder, wasn't it?"

"Quite right, Jacqueline. I've decided that I've done with Lutman and his dirty jobs."

"Why?" asked the girl. "Why have you decided that?"

Again Charles was silent.

"I'll tell you why," said Jacqueline. "Because something tremendous has happened to you, something that's pushing you up again, just as I said it would. Something quite tremendous has happened to you, Charles, hasn't it?"

His voice was not quite steady as he replied.

"Yes, Jacqueline. The most tremendous thing in the world has happened to me."

"When?" she demanded. "When did this tremendous thing happen to you?"

"At Cohenzil—on the terrace," said Charles.

"Thanks, Charles," she said. "That's all I wanted you to tell me. Good night."

"Good night," said Charles, and softly closed the door.

At 12 o'clock, when Lutman walked into the office, Charles was seated at his desk, deep in the study of an impressive-looking tome. Lutman seated himself on a chair on the opposite side of the desk.

"Good evening, Charles," he said pleasantly. "One of these days, if you continue to be so studious and industrious, you may become quite an eminent lawyer—provided, of course, that the Law society don't decide to remove your name from the rolls."

Stuckey did not glance up at him.

"Just a moment before you start talking, Lutman," he said. "I'm chasing a rather tricky point and I don't want to lose the thread."

"He turned a page and frowned. "This book doesn't make it at all clear. I'll see what Chitty says."

He got up, went to the bookshelf, took out Chitty on Contracts and stood for some moments, his back toward Lutman, pouring over it. Then, replacing the book, he returned to his seat.

"That settles it," he said. "Chitty is always reliable. And now, Lutman, I'm at your service."

"What is it this time—blackmail? Or merely another perfect little gentleman to serve as a husband for Jacqueline Smith?"

"The worthy Charles is pleased to be facetious," smiled Lutman. "Blackmail, as you know, is a clumsy method of earning a living, and whatever else I may be, Charles, I am never clumsy. But don't let us start an argument. You're liable to become heated in argument, Charles—especially lately."

Let us discuss the affair calmly and quietly."

"If you've some fresh affair in mind, Lutman..."

"Fresh? You should know me better than that, Charles. One thing at a time, and that done well, is my motto. Until the Jacqueline Smith business is satisfactorily concluded, no fresh affair is of the least interest to me."

"The Jacqueline Smith business is finished. Not satisfactorily, perhaps, but definitely finished. Jacqueline has refused to marry Jim Asson, and she has refused to marry you—I suppose you asked her, didn't you?"

"Naturally," smiled Lutman. "It was the obvious way out of the impasse."

"And she turned you down? But of course she would. And that finishes it. Get that clear, Lutman, will you? There's no other way of laying hands on the money and the whole scheme is off. The sooner you realize that and produce Jacqueline, if you've done her any injury..."

"Yes, you told me. If I remember rightly you were to break every bone in my body. And I told you that I had no idea where the girl was."

"You were lying, Lutman. Do you suppose I don't know what was in your mind? Jim Asson knew, anyway. He knew that rather than lose the money you wouldn't stop at murder."

Lutman raised a hand in protest. "My dear Charles, if you believe that of me, you misjudge me. Such a thought never entered my head. And if you want proof of that, and that I had nothing to do with Jacqueline's disappearance, I can give you quite convincing proof. Jacqueline has reappeared. I've seen her—this evening—at her mother's flat."

"In other words, Lutman, you got scared and decided not to go on with your scheme. Where is she now? At home?"

"She was at home," replied the other. "I saw her there. But she was in a somewhat hysterical condition and had a quarrel with her mother, and went off in a temper, saying she would never come back. He smiled. "But she will, Charles. As soon as her tantrums are over she'll be back home again and then we can proceed."

"Proceed?"

Lutman nodded.

"Proceed to the collection of the $1,500,000, Charles—at least, to my share of it. Unfortunately our original scheme has miscarried. Jacqueline knows of the will at my flat, and I'm afraid she understood it. In that case she is hardly likely to sign a deed handing it all over to her husband."

"If she has seen the will the whole thing is finished."

"On the contrary, Charles. There are other means. Don't forget that I have put a great deal of time and trouble and money into this particular enterprise, and I don't propose to abandon it without some compensation. I shall not be exacting. $300,000 will satisfy me, and there should be no difficulty about my getting that."

"You're an optimist, Lutman. It looks hopeless to me."

"It would be hopeless," Lutman admitted, "but for one most fortunate fact, and that fact is, Charles, that Jacqueline Smith is in love with you. I have not the least doubt of it. She is so much in love with you that if you tell her you drew up that deed in good faith, knowing nothing of the will, she will believe you. Tell her anything you like to exonerate yourself and she will believe you. It's up to you to work out the details of convincing defense, and you may rely on me to back you up."

"Thanks," said Charles with a wry smile.

"And that leaves the way clear for you to marry her."

"Thanks," said Charles again. "We're not going to argue about it," added Lutman. "You're going to marry Jacqueline. Of course, you can refuse, but I don't fancy you will." He tapped his pocket.

"I still have that scrap of paper, Charles, and I still have that deed which you drew up, so I feel sure you will be reasonable."

"I suppose I agree, Lutman? You won't be any nearer your $100,000, will you?"

"Much, much nearer," Charles, smiled the other. "I shall still have the scrap of paper, and if you bear that in mind I feel sure you will find some way of persuading your wife to let you have $100,000. I'm sure, anyway, that you will try very hard. And if you can't persuade her—I should dislike being obliged to do it, but I fancy a sight of that scrap of paper would persuade her. I don't believe that a woman with $1,500,000 would refuse to pay a paltry $100,000 to get possession of a document which might easily ruin her husband."

"I see," said Charles thoughtfully. "So I'm to marry Jacqueline Smith so that you may have the opportunity to blackmail her for $100,000?"

"Crudely expressed, Charles, but substantially correct. Well?"

Stuckey was silent for a time, gazing thoughtfully at his blotting pad.

"Darn you, Lutman!" he exclaimed at last. "It's always the same, isn't it? You've got me down, and you keep me down, with every dirty scheme you evolve in that rotten mind of yours. Why can't you let up on me? Why can't you give me a chance? Lord knows I've done enough dirty jobs for you in the past."

DIET AND HEALTH

Prevention of Infection First Rule of Treatment

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE DOMESTIC science teacher, nurse, Boy or Girl Scout, or house mother, is called upon to administer first aid frequently. In doing so confidence is of great importance, and there is nothing that contributes more to confidence than acquiring simple methods. The first aid is not supposed to treat an injury for complete cure, but simply to prepare it for the doctor who will apply the final scientific arrangement.

The second thing that is demanded of first aid is that it shall do no harm.

Both of these things are summed up principally in the first thing that must always be considered, and that is the prevention of infection. Any open wound, cut, bruise or burn is liable to infection from the air, from contaminated dressings, and from finger touches. The germs, the staphylococcus and streptococcus, which cause skin infection in the great majority of cases, are everywhere in nature, always ready to pounce into an open wound and begin to grow and do harm.

Never wash a wound. Never try to irrigate it. If the wound is already infected, pouring water over it simply spreads the infection around. If you haven't a sterile piece of gauze to put on the wound, don't put anything on it. Air is less dangerous than a contacting object. It is easy enough to make a sterile dressing by taking a handkerchief or a towel and putting it in boiling water for three minutes. After this is cooled off and been wrung out, put a surface which your hands have not touched against the wound and you have done all that can be done immediately.

If Wound Is Deep

In any wound that is at all deep or looks serious, it is best not to try to use antiseptics, such as iodine or mercurchrome, but wait for the doctor to make his decision. If the edges of the wound are dirty and are to be wiped off, boiling water always should be used, as some of it is likely to seep into the wound.

Avoid court plaster and collodion, also surgeon's plaster or adhesive tape, except to hold a bandage from slipping out of place.

All other methods of first aid treatment are secondary to this one of preventing infection. It is better to do nothing than to do something doubtful. If a doctor is available and can be reached within a half hour, it won't hurt to leave even a deep wound uncovered until he arrives.

If in a wound in which home first aid has been used exclusively and it has been decided it is not serious enough to call the doctor, infection develops in a day or two, it will be known by redness, pain, red streaks in the skin around the wound, or the presence of pus. Certainly under these circumstances medical advice should be sought.

The simple, modern first aid treatment of every little scratch represents an accumulation of human knowledge painfully built up through ages of research, experiment and experience. It is simple enough now to apply an antiseptic and a sterile dressing. Yet in the background stand Harvey's studies of blood circulation, Pasteur's revelation of bacteria, Lister's pioneering in antiseptics, and many other outstanding contributions to human progress.

FELLER GETS IN GAME

Young Phenom Walks One, Then Goes to Bench

NEW YORK, May 19.—(UP)—The Philadelphia Athletics have ceased to be a joke. The team that lost 100 games last season and finished in the cellar, hangs on to the American league lead with grim seriousness.

Twice in the last two days the Athletics were licked going into the ninth. On Monday they came from behind to score two runs and whip the world champion Yankees, 5-2. Yesterday, they staged another eighth inning uprising to score three runs and pluck an 8-7 victory from Detroit. It was the fourth straight victory for the A's over the Tigers.

Cochrane Chided

One of 74-year-old Connie Mack's rookies yelled at Manager Mickey Cochrane from the dugout: "Hey, Mickey, don't you wish you were back catching for Philadelphia?" That crack seems to have sized up the situation from all angles. The A's are clicking on all cylinders and making the most of their opportunities. The Tigers are floundering badly, playing only at a 500 gait.

Detroit led 7-5 when the A's came to bat in the eighth. Eldon Auker walked Marty Peters, hit Wally Moses with a pitched ball and then he fanned Bob Johnson. But Alfred Lovill (Chubby) Dean (no relation to Dizzy) hit a home run over the right field fence, and that punch decided the game. Frank Hayes, A's catcher, hit a homer with one man on in the fourth. Harry Kelley went the route, winning his third game.

Spud Chandler, former University of Georgia football star, kept the Yankees at the A's heels—half a game separating them—by blanking the Chicago White Sox, 4-0. It was the sixth shutout of the American league season, the others being pitched by Stratton (2), Gill, Pearson, and Andrews. Lou Gehrig hit his second homer of the season. Ted Lyons pitched seven innings for the White Sox, allowing seven hits and being charged with the defeat.

Errors by Domenic Dallesandro, midjet rookie outfielder, and Eric McNair in the ninth started a four-run rally enabling Cleveland to trim the Boston Red Sox, 7-4. The Indians used four pitchers in the ninth to head off a Red Sox rally. Bob Feller made his first appearance since he injured his arm, as a relief man, but was yanked after walking a man. Lyn Larry had a perfect day at bat, getting "4 for 4." Jimmy Foss hit a homer with one man on.

Part of Crippled Cub Team Ready for Work

CHICAGO, May 19.—(UP)—Three of the eleven crippled Chicago Cubs were scheduled back in the ball game today at the start of a 12-game stand expected to place them in the National league pennant race for the first time this season.

Jim Carleton, Leo (Gabby) Hartnett and Bill Jurges, their bum arms healed, were ready to go against the Brooklyn Dodgers. Seven others will be back before the week is out and Manager Charlie Grimm was convinced the worst injury streak ever to hit the Cubs was all over.

"It couldn't get much worse," he grinned. Grimm's remaining problem was long-jawed Curt Davis, the starting right hander who hasn't pitched an inning since he worked against the White Sox at Yuma, April 2. Unless the annual kink vanishes from Davis' arm he will go into retirement to make way for another pitcher—if the Cubs can find one. All their efforts to bargain with other major league clubs have met with outlandish demands.

155 Player Days Lost In all, the Cubs' hospital list—which at one time or other virtually has the club's roster—caused the loss of 155 player days since the season opened. Still the team managed to win almost half its games and completed the last road trip, in its worst physical condition, with a record of seven victories in 13 games.

Chief reasons for the remarkable showing were Big Bill Lee, new iron man pitcher of the league, and infielder Lonnie Frey, who filled the gap at shortstop and began to hit everything in sight. Leading the club's sluggers, Frey built up an average of .365 in his 15 days work.

With Carleton, Davis and Larry French hurt, the full pitching load fell on Lee. He worked 10 of the last 23 games, taking his regular turn and finishing the jobs his mates couldn't handle. He has pitched 61 innings, more than any other hurler in the league. Return of Carleton today enabled Grimm to ease up on Lee.

Louis Cardinals remained three and a half games apart when both won yesterday in the only two National league games not rained out.

MORRIS, OLYMPIC CHAMPION, QUILTS AMATEUR RANKS

HOLLYWOOD, May 19.—(UP)—Glenn Morris, world's decathlon champion, today joined the select group of former amateur athletes who have found their greater reward in the movies.

The former Denver automobile salesman announced that he was turning professional to make Tarzan pictures which will bring him $250,000 the next five years.

That completed the formalities. He signed the contract with principal pictures several weeks ago and already has made advertising scenes posing with apes. Dan Ferris, head of the A. A. U., gave him permission to take film tests without jeopardizing his amateur standing. Officially, Ferris has just heard about the contract Morris signed, and had warned him that if he complied with it, his amateur career would be ended. Morris made the standard reply:

"Much as I respect the A. A. U. I can't go on living on watches and silver cups."

Thus he joined a colony of tennis, swimming, golf, football and ice skating stars who found this profitable market for their talents ahead of him.

Morris had keen competition for his new job. Several athletes were tested, including Lou Gehrig of baseball fame, who was not so convincing as a tree-swinging. He is to replace Johnny Weissmuller, the swimmer and original Tarzan of the movies; is scheduled to make two ape-man pictures a year and will begin work next month on "Tarzan's Revenge."

About This And That In Many Sports

By BILL BRAUCHER

Schmeling Training

NEW YORK, May 19 — Some of the boys have started a guessing bee concerning the strange antics of Mister Max Schmeling...

With Heavyweight Champion Jimmy Braddock training at Grand Beach, Mich., to meet Joe Louis in Chicago on June 22, Max Schmeling continues blithely conditioning himself at Speculator, N. Y., with what is pronounced the intention of fighting Braddock, June 3, at Long Island City.

The Broadway analysts' inference is that one of those lefts of Joe Louis landed on Schmeling, after all, and that its effects are just beginning to be felt...

Herr Schmeling never has been noted for being silly, and it's the wild guess of this department that he is training at Speculator really for not one fight but two...

It is far amiss to surmise that Schmeling will take on a warmup fight shortly after the moon on June 3 passes uneventfully over an empty Long Island bowl...

and then in September tackle winner of the Braddock-Louis bout?

Stage to Be Set

Naturally the Garden doesn't want to announce now that Schmeling's opponent for the June warmup fight has been selected...

that would be a public expression of failure of the Braddock-Schmeling negotiations for June 3, and those negotiations are still pursuing the legal tenor of their ways...

but after June 3, the Garden probably will issue a snappy statement to the effect that since Braddock failed to appear in Long Island Bowl to box with Schmeling, another fight will be sought for the German.

Breaks Aid Tommy

Not often does a young ball player fall heir to such a series of good breaks as Tommy Henrich, new left fielder of the Yankees, has received...

back in 1933 Tommy was playing softball in Canton, O., when the team disbanded he started playing hard ball for the first time...

now he is playing regularly as a member of the world's champion team.

The first break was when a scout for the Tigers went to Canton to inspect a pitcher named Dye...

the scout liked Henrich better than Dye, but did not sign him at once...

later that year, Henrich was scouted by Bill Bradley of the Indians, and signed to play...

the Indians farmed him until this year when he was transferred to Milwaukee...

Billy Evans wrote a magazine piece calling Tommy a $15,000 ball player...

so Henrich became curious and wrote to Judge Landis to find out just whose property he was, since Cleveland had farmed him three times, the limit under the baseball code.

Landis investigated, decided Cleveland was trying to cover up ownership of the young player, and declared him a free agent...

on the strength of Billy Evans' recommendation, several teams offered Henrich a bonus for signing...

Tom took the Yankee offer, reported to be between $20,000 and $25,000...

Having no immediate need for his services, the Yanks decided to farm Henrich, but things began happening to Yankee outfielders as soon as Henrich was signed...

Jake Powell came down with appendicitis, and the man from Canton was called in and given a uniform...

in his first two games, Henrich rewarded his new bosses by driving in the runs that won.

Henrich is 21... he was born at Massillon, O., and before joining the Yankees he had seen about a dozen big league games at Cleveland...

he saw Babe Ruth play in Cleveland, and it was Babe's hitting, he says, that inspired him to give up the life of a clerk in the steel mills and go in for baseball.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

NO CARD UNIMPORTANT!

THERE IS NO such thing as an unimportant card. Even the difference in size between a deuce and a trey can determine whether you make a contract or get set. Especially in the matter of entries, it is sometimes vital to preserve the smallest card in the deck so that it can be led across to the dummy.

13th heart, discarding the two losing diamonds. The spade finesse worked, but, alas, he had no trump smaller than the 3 to get him into dummy again for a second sure finesse, so he lost a spade at the end.

Had the declarer looked ahead before carelessly trumping the heart Ace with his club 2, he would have used a high one. Thus sufficient entries could have been created in the dummy to provide for the setting up of the heart suit and for the two needed finesses in spades.

(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

East's opening bid was 1-Diamond, South bid 5-Clubs, West 5-Diamonds, South 6-Clubs, East 6-Diamonds and South 7-Clubs as an intended sacrifice, West doubling.

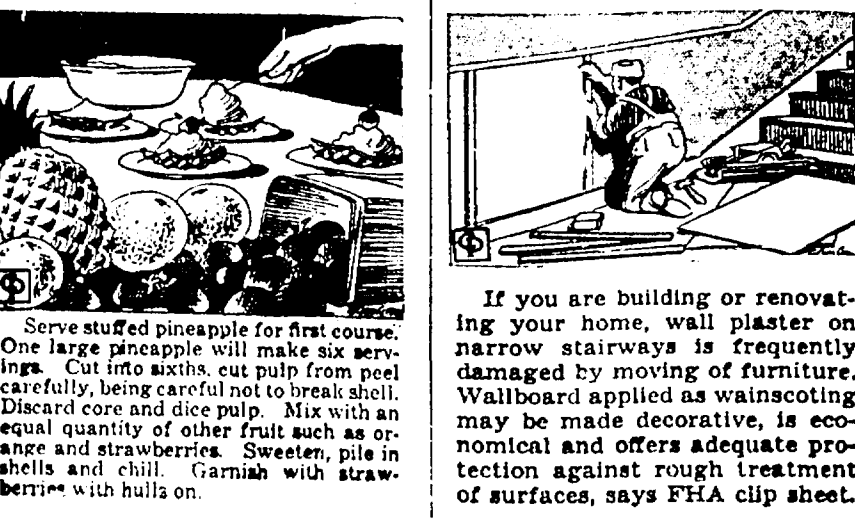

The heart Ace was led, and South trumped with the club 2. He next overtook the trump 10 with the 3 to lead a heart and ruff high. The club 5 to the 8 made an entry for a second heart ruff. The club 4 to the 7 furnished a third entry to play the K and the 13th heart, discarding the two losing diamonds.

OUT LEADERS, CITIZENS URGED TO ATTEND MEETING TO PLAN CAMPAIGN

ONEY NEEDED TO RETAIN AID OF AREA OFFICE

Reed Shafer To Preside As Many Civic Leaders Gather in M. E. Church

PROGRESS IMPERATIVE

Bricker Heads Executive Board in Central Ohio

Troop leaders, committeemen, and local citizens interested in youth work generally will meet Thursday in the parlor of the Methodist church at 7:30 p. m. to organize a financial campaign on behalf of the Boy Scout movement in Circleville and Pickaway county. Reed Shafer, vice-chairman of the Pickaway district, will preside in the absence of James I. Smith, Jr., district chairman, who is out of the city.

The success or failure of this meeting will determine whether or not scouting under professional guidance and direction will continue here. Civic leaders, educators, ministers, parents and others who approve of this popular youth movement are not only invited, but urged to attend.

Other Counties Share

Pickaway county is the only one of the eight counties of the Central Ohio Area Council, Boy Scouts of America, which did not share the expense of maintaining the Council during the last year. Campaigns are under way this month in every district to enroll sustaining members and obtain funds for another year. Local citizens, including Smith, Shafer, Ed Ebert, George McDowell, Robert Terhune, Dwight Steele, Dr. G. D. Phillips, Frank Fischer, Karl Herrmann, Carl Leist, Frank Barnhill, the Rev. H. A. Sayre, and several others have indicated a desire to see Circleville and surrounding communities do their part in raising money at this time.

The executive board of the Central Ohio Area Council, of which John W. Bricker is president, controls the expenditure of all funds. Both Smith and Shafer, representing the Pickaway district, are members of this board. The council maintains an office, where all records are kept, and information on scouting may be obtained, in addition to providing trained professional leaders who work closely with the scores of volunteer leaders who serve boys as district officials and troop leaders.

Although most of the expense of operating the Area Council is paid by the Columbus Community Fund, each district contributes to some extent in order that field work will not be limited to the metropolitan area. By the use of the area council plan, scouting is one of the most economically administered social agencies in the country.

Seven County Troops

At the present time there are seven troops in the Pickaway district, three of which are in Circleville. Scouting is a leisure time program of character training and citizenship building activities designed to supplement the church, home and school. Institutions, using their own leaders, use scouting for their own boys. Any boy, twelve years of age or older may become a scout.

JOHN TEETS, 24, NEIGHBOR, KILLS WELDON J. BABB

Young Perry Township Tenant Defends Wife of Deceased Man

he picked up one of his slippers and started beating her.

She ran from the house toward the Teets home. On the way, Babb knocked her down in a ditch and kicked her, she told the sheriff.

After allegedly beating his wife, Babb returned to his home, obtained his automobile and, with one of his children in the car, drove to the Teets residence, stopping his car in the front yard with its lights burning.

Babb was waving a nickel-plated flashlight, the sheriff was told, and shouted he was going in the house and "kill them all."

Flashlight Mistaken

Persons in the Teets home thought he was carrying a pistol as the flashlight was not lighted. Radcliff said Teets obtained the shotgun and was standing inside the home as Babb approached.

Teets fired the two shots and Babb fell after taking about three steps, Radcliff said. Death was sudden. His body was about 20 feet from the home.

The sheriff was told the Teets family had lived on the farm about two months. They previously had lived there, then moved, and Babb persuaded them to return.

John Teets, the parents said, went to the home of relatives in the neighborhood Tuesday night after the shooting. He was not questioned by officers. Tuesday night, but was to be questioned Wednesday.

Mrs. Babb told Radcliff she urged Teets to shoot.

C. E. Hill, Williamsport funeral director, notified Sheriff Radcliff about the shooting. The body was removed to the Hill funeral home.

Sheriff Radcliff said on several occasions Babb had made reports to him that his stock was being poisoned, but nothing could ever be developed from the reports.

Live on U. S. Property

The Babb residence on the former David Porter farm, later owned by an insurance company, and now owned by the government for its Rural Resettlement project. The farm is on the Locust Grove road.

Weldon Jennings Babb was born Sept. 7, 1904 in Clarksburg, a son of Albert and Ida Goldsberry Babb, now residents of Greenfield. He married Bertha Hulse on Sept. 1, 1926.

The parents, his widow, and three children, Richard W., Mary Joan, and Betty Jean, and a brother, Francis Babb, of Utica, survive.

The funeral will be Friday at 2 p. m. at the home with the Rev. D. H. Householder officiating. Burial will be in Springlawn cemetery by C. E. Hill.

The body will be removed to the Babb home where friends may view it after 6 p. m. Thursday.

GEORGIA CAT SELECTS STRANGE BIRTHPLACES

MARIETTA, Ga., May 19. — (UP)—Kitty, a whimsical cat owned by Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Wellons and noted for the unusual places she picks to introduce her frequent litters, today nursed triplets in a squirrel's nest.

Last March she established a temporary maternity ward in the bottom of a large brick column. It requested four days to rescue her with an improved nest.

letter "P" represented preaching the word of God; "A" represented aid to the afflicted, sick and discouraged; "S", service to his church and his community; "O", tolerance with sinners, youth; "T", obligations to the church, and "R", a righteous individual. "The word means Rev. Toensmeier," he said.

Pastors Add Respects

The Rev. Herman S. Sayre paid tribute to the pastor and his wife and wished them "golden days ahead." "It has been fine for folk like us to have folk like you," said the Rev. T. C. Harper.

Best wishes of the colored folk of the city were expressed at the meeting by Mary Lou Henderson and Fred Scott.

"I'll have to look in a mirror to see if it's myself," the Rev. Mr. Toensmeier said. "We never work alone, and the work we have done has been in cooperation with Circleville people. The work I have done here would never have been accomplished without the fine assistance of Mrs. Toensmeier. She has been my critic."

"All the fellowship, friendship and experiences here are so deeply rooted we shall never forget them."

Mrs. Toensmeier was presented with a beautiful bouquet from the Brehmer greenhouses.

The program ended with a paper of tribute and appreciation read by Fred C. Clark. "If the good deeds of Rev. Toensmeier were put down on an accounting sheet it would look like a war debt," he said.

S. G. Rader, master of ceremonies for the affair, was introduced by the Rev. L. C. Sherburne.

Music Provided

Music was furnished by a quartet consisting of Mrs. Melvin Yates, Miss Eleanor Snyder, Franklin Price and Adrian Yates. Miss Abbe Mills Clark was accompanist. In addition to the numbers by the quartet, Miss Snyder and Mr. Price sang several duets.

Fred Clark lead group singing and Frank Lynch acted as marshal to see that everyone took part.

The Rev. Mr. Sherburne, chairman of the affair, expressed appreciation to Miss Marjorie Brown and Mr. Clark for assistance in plans.
